Air-Ground School

BY BRIG. GEN. WILLIAM M. GROSS
Commandant, USAF Air-Ground Operations
School, Southern Pines, N. C.

THE campaigns in Korea have proved once more that despite minor deviations due to the peculiar characteristics of the Korean action the basic doctrine for the integration of air power with surface forces evolved during World War II is sound. This doctrine has been the subject of constant study and development since it was first accepted during the last war. The Korean War is serving the important purpose of giving it, in its current state of development, the most realistic adaptation that can be devised for military ideas—the test of combat. These operations indicate that this basic doctrine has sufficient inherent flexibility to enable it to be applied to special situations.

In the past, and particularly at the beginning of the Korean conflict, there was a woeful lack of properly trained personnel to operate the system employed in the integration of airpower with the ground forces. The Army has a need for a reservoir of adequately trained personnel to operate the air-ground operations system, through which the Army's requirements for air support are presented to the Air Force. The Air Force likewise has a need for trained personnel in the tactical air operations system who are also familiar with Army requirements for air support as well as Air Force doctrine, tactics and procedures.

What, then, is being done to ensure that the senior officers of the Air Force and the Army understand the doctrine for the integration of air power with surface forces in a military campaign? It is to fulfill this need that the Tactical Air Command is operating the USAF Air-Ground Operations School at Southern Pines, North Carolina.

The School's mission is to indoctrinate key personnel of the Armed Forces, from general officers to selected company grade officers, in the doctrine, tactics, techniques, and system by which the efforts of the Air and Ground forces are integrated to accomplish a common objective.

It is unique in that the School is organized and operates by the same principles of integration that govern the

Study Possible LDO For Each Service

The Department of Defense has launched a comprehensive study concerning the possibility of establishing Limited Duty Officer ranks in each of the Services.

At the present time, the Navy and Marine Corps have Limited Duty Officers, but not the Army or Air Force.

Defense officials said that ultimately a decision may be reached to utilize LDO's instead of warrant officers, but they emphasized that energetic action will be taken in the 83d Congress to obtain passage of the long-delayed warrant officer bill.

The LDO study is a long-range proposition, and no conclusions are expected for some time. If changes are decided upon in the warrant officer structure, it is a certainty that all rights and benefits of those currently serving in warrant officer grades will be zealously protected.

The Department of Defense study group is under the chairmanship of Col. E. P. Foley, USMC, with Col. R. T. Romine, USAF, as representative of the Department of Defense.

Other members of the group are Col. T. S. Torresson, Jr., USAF, Comdr. L. B. Ensey, USN, Lt. J. M. Lynn, USN, Maj. C. J. Howard, USA, and Chief Warrant Officer C. R. Hendry, USA.

It is understood that the Navy is the strongest advocate among the Services for elimination of warrant officers and their replacement by Limited Duty Officers. The Army and Air Force are said to believe such a proposal merits careful study, but that possibly Limited Duty Officers should not be required to compete for promotion with all other officers but should be on separate lists in the ranks of second lieutenant, first lieutenant, captain and major, roughly corresponding to the ranks of warrant officer.

Incentive Pay Meeting

Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett has alerted the Services to the scheduled meeting of the Department of Defense Incentive Pay Commission on 19 Dec.

The Commission, headed by Rear Adm. Lewis L. Strauss, USNR, inactive, is expected to hear the top civilian and military officials of each Service.

The 19 Dec. meeting probably will be the last held by the Commission prior to the submittal of its report to Secretary Lovett before 1 Jan.

A technical staff reportedly already has begun preliminary work on the Commission's report. Recommendations of the Strauss Commission will affect hazardous duty and incentive pay.

National Guard-Reserve Leaders Give O.K. To Army Promotion Plan, Urge Speedy Release of Regulation

The Army's top advisors on National Guard and Reserve affairs—the Section Five Committee—has urged speedy release of a proposed regulation which will affect promotions of scores of thousands of Civilian Component officers not on active duty.

The Section Five Committee has given its endorsement to a tentative draft of the promotion regulation, which has been returned to Department of the Army officials for implementation.

The regulation results from passage of the Armed Forces Reserve Act, which will go into effect on 1 Jan. Therefore, in view of this date, early release of the regulation is anticipated.

At the recent Pentagon session during which the regulation was carefully studied and approved, the Section Five Committee went on record with the recommendation that for the next year or two promotions in the National Guard and Reserve be made under provisions of a regulation, easily amended, rather than under more rigid legislation enacted by Congress.

That the Section Five group would approve the promotion regulation was foreseen. Throughout its preparation, leaders of the National Guard and Reserve Officers' Association participated in detailed studies with Army personnel experts and their recommendations are incorporated in the regulation.

A Reserve official told THE JOURNAL this week that delay in publication of the promotion regulation would have an adverse effect on morale. He expressed the hope that implementation of the new promotion plan would coincide with

Air Battles Predominate In Korea; Navy Launches Biggest Carrier Attack

Air action over Korea again was predominate this week as fighting on the ground continued relatively quiet in all sectors of the United Nations front except the Central sector where the Reds launched their strongest attack in two months.

One of the biggest single aerial hauls of the war was made last Sunday by Air Force pilots who tangled with the enemy over "MIG Alley" between Sinuiju on the Yalu River and the Sinanju-Pyongyang area. Seven MIGs were knocked down by Fifth Air Force F-86 Sabre jets. Also during the period, the Navy launched its biggest aerial attack since the Korean fighting began.

The Air Force kills were registered by pilots flying protective cover for other Fifth Air Force jets, Marine, Australian and South Korean fighter-bombers making a heavy raid on the Haeju Peninsula. A Communist troop and supply center northwest of the North Korean capital was also hit by the fighter-bombers.

One of the MIGs was blasted from the sky by 2d Lt. Edmund G. Hepner who had been shot down himself a fortnight before. It was his first MIG. Other kills were registered by two fliers who were already aces: Col. Royal Baker and 1st Lt. Cecil D. Foster; by RAF Flight Lt. John Nichols, 1st Lt. John Ludwig, Lt. Col. Lewis Green, and Capt. Houston Tuell. All are assigned to the Fourth and 51st Fighter-Interceptor Wings.

The fighter-bomber raid was made by more than 175 F-84 Thunderjets and Shooting Stars. An estimated 65 buildings used for enemy troops and stores were destroyed. In the "side" raid, northwest of Pyongyang, three enemy buildings were demolished and four damaged.

An eighth MIG was downed on Monday by the Sabrejets as they again flew a protective screen over Northwest Korea for fighter-bombers which concentrated on enemy communications lines. Six road and rail bridges were attacked and four reported destroyed.

Royal Australian Air Force Meteor jets flew cover for B-26 light bombers which knocked out a road bridge at Sohung. Two other bridges southeast of Sonchon were damaged by Thunderjets which also hit an automatic weapons post defending the bridges.

Marine Panther jets operating northwest of Yangdok made eleven cuts in rail lines, while F-80s destroyed 10 buildings and touched off a big secondary explosion in an attack on a troop concentration area Northeast of Suan.

On Tuesday, 9 Dec., another MIG was added to the Air Force bag, and on Wednesday Lt. James F. Low made his eighth MIG kill of the war. The Air Force also said a plane listed as probably destroyed by Lt. Alfred M. Millerin on Sunday had been confirmed as destroyed.

Naval Action

The big Naval air action was recorded on Tuesday when fighter bombers of Task Force 77 from the Essex, Bon Homme Richard and Oriskany hit rail and supply terminals of the Manchurian Korea railway. The planes dealt aerial blows to the four important rail and supply centers of Hunyung, Musan, Najin and Hyesanjin. Essex planes, ranging farther North than any UN bombers have gone in the entire Korean war, blasted the border railroad city of Hunyung. Successive waves of Panthers, Skyraiders and Corsairs hit railroad marshalling yards in the center of the town with more than 38 tons of high explosives, completely wiping out the vital rail line and destroying eight railroad repair shops, two locomotives and 30 boxcars. Twelve other rail cars were heavily damaged. The three carriers launched 352 sorties in the attack.

Hunyung is situated in the very Northeast corner of Korea only a few hundred yards from the Manchurian border. It is the point of entry to Korea for the major East Coast rail line. Navy pilots reported the whole area over Hunyung was black with smoke. There was no enemy opposition.

Flying far to the North, Bon Homme Richard fighter bombers and Panther jets bombarded railroad facilities at Musan near the Manchurian border Southwest of Hunyung. The Corsairs and Skyraiders destroyed a railroad turntable, heavily damaged a locomotive repair building and scored direct hits on a round-house. They also damaged eight buildings and a locomotive and cut tracks in three places. Coordinating jets destroyed another locomotive and set fire to four buildings with secondary explosions. Heavy damage was administered one locomotive and six boxcars. Seven railcuts were made. After the first raid in the morning, the planes returned in the afternoon and heavily damaged three locomotives, tearing up 500 yards of rails and partially destroying a roundhouse and an adjacent building. Four other buildings were also destroyed.

Oriskany aircraft concentrated on Hyesanjin, a North Korean railroad and industrial center located on the Yalu River in Northwestern Korea. Prop-driven planes accounted for the bulk of destruction. The planes destroyed three buildings at the city water works, damaged six others in a factory area and touched off secondary explosions and a large fire. In the Northeast sector of the city, four large buildings were damaged and three boxcars and two tanks cars were added to the Oriskany's total.

Before dawn, Oriskany hecklers ranged the Northern part of Korea, producing many breaks in the Communist supply routes. Corsairs destroyed one truck and damaged five, then proceeded to halt 15 more by bombing the road. Their best target was a fuel storage facility, which exploded and burned. In addition they succeeded in partially blocking a railroad tunnel entrance by starting a landslide with their bombs. Skyraiders racked up a total of five destroyed trucks with 14 more damaged.

For their day's work the three carriers received the following message from Rear Adm. Johnson, Commander of Task Force 77: "A heavy sustained schedule was given you today and your response was magnificent. The enemy has suffered heavy damage. Well done."

Ground Action

With temperatures in the near-zero range, the ground fighting this week was stepped up in the Central sector but remained relatively quiet in the other areas.

In the Western sector, action was confined largely to small patrol skirmishes with enemy groups up to two squads in strength. Latest reports indicated that there was little significant activity.

In the Central sector, the enemy hurled attacks ranging up to two companies in size against Little Nori Hill, Northwest of Yonchon, driving ROK troops from their positions twice in the first 17 hours of fighting. About 3,000 Red troops were estimated to make up the attack force. Earlier, enemy patrols had continued to harass Sniper Ridge positions with minor attacks. The Eighth Army reported that all earlier enemy drives were pushed back in firefights. Heavy artillery barrages accompanied the attacks on Little Nori.

In the Eastern sector Eighth Army raiders killed an estimated 16 enemy and destroyed five bunkers in a 20 minute fight with a reinforced enemy platoon at an enemy hill position northwest of Kamsong. An enemy platoon probing at Christmas Hill was repulsed after a 36 minute fight and a small group probing northwest of the Punchbowl was driven off. Patrols fought engagements up to six hours and a half in length with enemy groups up to a platoon in strength.

Casualties

New casualty figures for the week show 78 deaths including 69 in the Army, six Marine Corps, three Air Force and no Navy. Two-hundred-twelve men were listed as wounded in action during the period, including 169 Army, three Navy, 40 Marine Corps and no Air Force. The Marine Corps added one man to its missing-in-action figures, making a total of 486. Revised MIA figures for the other Services show totals of 10,051 Army, 76 Navy, and 777 Air Force.

Selections Near For Service Secretaries

The return of President-Elect Dwight D. Eisenhower and Secretary of Defense-designate Charles E. Wilson is expected to be followed quickly by announcement of the Secretaries of Army, Navy, and Air Force.

Speculation increased this week as to the men to be chosen to head the Services.

Army

Two former civilian officials of the Army—both also former officers—reportedly are receiving top consideration to be Secretary of the Army in the Eisenhower Administration.

Mentioned prominently as possible choices are former Assistant Secretary of the Army Hanford MacNider (1925-28), and former Under Secretary of the Army Tracy S. Voorhees (Asst. Sec'y in 1948 and Under Sec'y. in 1949).

A former commander of the American Legion (1921-1922), Major General MacNider saw service on the Mexican Border, was in Europe with the A.E.F. in World War I, and served in the Southwest Pacific during World War II. He was made commanding general of the 103d Infantry Division, Reserve, in 1946. General MacNider has been prominent also in Republican Party activities.

In addition to General MacNider, careful consideration is also being given to Mr. Voorhees, a colonel in the Reserve.

It is interesting to note that on 18 Aug. 1948, then Secretary of the Army Kenneth C. Royall (who supported General Eisenhower in the election campaign) appointed Mr. Voorhees as President of Army Emergency Relief. At the same time, General Eisenhower was named Honorary President, to fill a post held by General of the Armies John J. Pershing from 1942 until his death in July 1948.

During the time General Eisenhower served as Chief of Staff, Mr. Voorhees, a colonel in the Reserve, was on duty with the General Staff and before reverting to inactive status in February 1946 was Special Assistant to the Secretary of War.

His World War II service included duty with the Judge Advocate General's Department, the Office of the Surgeon General and as head of missions to reorganize medical supply systems in the European, China-Burma-India and Pacific Theaters.

After leaving active service, Mr. Voorhees served in civilian capacity as Special Assistant to Secretary of War Robert P. Patterson. He was made Assistant Secretary of the Army on 18 June 1948 and Under Secretary on 22 Aug. 1949.

Navy

A new list of officers and directors of the Navy League of the United States, issued this week, lists Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball—minus title—as one of 12 national vice presidents. Alongside his name is the parenthetical notation: "(As of Jan. 21 1953)."

Two possible successors have been mentioned for Secretary Kimball's post. They are: Charles S. Thomas, former special assistant to the late James Forrestal when the latter was Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air; and David S. Ingalls, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Aeronautics in the Hoover Administration.

Mr. Thomas served on active duty with the Navy during World War I, first as a Chief Quartermaster, Aviation, at Seattle, and later in training as a Naval pilot at the NAS, San Diego. Before serving as Assistant to Mr. Forrestal, he was special assistant to Artemus Gates, Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air.

Mr. Ingalls, at the age of 19, was the Navy's lone World War I air ace. During World War II, he served in the Pacific as Assistant Operations Officer on the Staff of the Commander, Air Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet, and later as Plans Observer on the South Pacific Force and CO of the U. S. Naval Station at Honolulu. He holds a permanent rank of Captain in the USNR and has served in the temporary rank of Commodore.

Air Force

The man whose name is most frequently mentioned as a likely successor to Secretary of the Air Force Thomas K. Finletter is Harold E. Talbott.

Mr. Talbott has been affiliated with a number of aeronautical firms and was director of aircraft production for the War Production Board during World War II. He was a major in the Air Service in 1918.

Mr. Talbott has held important positions in the Republican Party.

Gen. Eisenhower's Dr. Recalled To Service

The Pentagon has issued orders—not made public heretofore—recalling Maj. Gen. Howard McC. Snyder, MC, USA-Ret., to active service.

He will be physician to President Dwight D. Eisenhower after 20 Jan. 1953.

The letter orders recalling General Snyder to service were dated 17 Nov., but were made effective as of 5 Nov., the day after the election.

General Snyder, who will be 72 years of age on 7 Feb. 1953, was retired for age on 1 March 1945, but was continued on active duty and in May 1946, while General Eisenhower was Chief of Staff, General Snyder was assigned to duty with the Advisory Group of the Chief of Staff.

He kept this assignment until 30 June, 1948, when he retired, four months after General Eisenhower left active Army service.

President Truman designated General Eisenhower as NATO commander on 16 Dec. 1950 and in January 1951, General Snyder was recalled to active duty again and assigned to the U. S. Army Element of the Supreme Headquarters, Allied Powers in Europe.

Shortly afterward, he became Special Advisor to General Eisenhower.

When General Eisenhower returned from Europe and was retired from active service on 31 May 1952, General Snyder was also restored to the retired list. He was with General Eisenhower during the political campaign in civilian status.

Now, General Snyder has been recalled to active duty for a third time.

New WAC Director Named, Succeeds Colonel Hallaren

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., has named Lt. Col. Irene O. Galloway as Director of the Women's Army Corps, to succeed Col. Mary A. Hallaren on 3 Jan.

The law provides for only one colonel in the WAC, so apparently Colonel Hallaren will revert to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

The Army announced no assignment for Colonel Hallaren, WAC Director since May, 1947, but there are reports she will be given an important overseas duty.

Simultaneously, it was announced that Lt. Col. Emily C. Gorman, WAC Staff Advisor, Second Army, Ft. George G. Meade, Md., will become Deputy Director of the WAC. She will replace Lt. Col. Mary Louise Milligan, whose assignment to Europe has been announced.

Colonel Galloway, who becomes the fourth Director of the WAC, assumed command of the WAC Training Center at Fort Lee, Va., on 24 Nov. 1952. Her replacement will be announced later.

Prior to that assignment, Colonel Galloway was WAC Staff Advisor for the European Command, from July 1948 to October 1952. Before going to Europe, she served in the Office, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, Personnel, at the Pentagon.

Assigned To NATO In Naples

Brig. Gen. Earle G. Wheeler, USA, has reported for duty at the NATO Headquarters of Admiral Robert B. Carney, U. S. Navy, Commander in Chief of Allied Forces in Southern Europe.

Reserve Act Q and A

The Army has made available a series of questions and answers on the Armed Forces Reserve Act, published herewith.

If I accept an indefinite term appointment, may I resign my commission at some time in the future?

Yes. It is hoped that normal separations by resignation may be allowed by 2 April 1953, when the emergency powers of World War II expire. It must be borne in mind, however, that persons who have a mandatory period of military service remaining, cannot be relieved of it simply by resignation. (Sec. 248, AFRA; Sec. 4(d) (3), UMT&S Act)

I have a five-year obligation to complete. What will my status be if I do not accept an indefinite term appointment?

You will be carried in your present status for the duration of your present appointment. (Sec. 4(d) (1), UMT&S Act; Sec. 209(a), AFRA)

Will there be a new promotion system for reserve officers and if so when will the new promotion regulations be issued?

Yes. New Reserve Officer promotion regulations will be promulgated prior to 1 January 1953 (Policy).

Is the purpose of the new indefinite appointments to give the Army a tighter hold on its reserve officers?

No. The primary purpose of the indefinite appointment is to obviate the necessity of reappointing reserve officers every five years, thus eliminating considerable administrative work. For many years Naval and Marine reserve officers and officers in the National Guard have been tendered indefinite appointments. (Policy)

May the term of enlistment or period of obligated service be extended in time of war?

Yes. In time of war or national emergency declared by the Congress such period of service may be extended until six months after the termination of the war or national emergency. (Sec. 227(b) and (c), AFRA)

Under the present organization of the ORC, I am a member of the Volunteer Reserve. What will be my status in the Army Reserve on 1 January 1953 when the Armed Forces Reserve Act becomes effective?

Every person who is a member of a reserve component on 1 January 1953, shall be deemed, without further action, to retain his active, inactive or retired status in his reserve component.

The Volunteer Reserve is part of the Active Reserve under current organization.

Members of the Volunteer Reserve will be placed in the Ready Reserve on 1 January 1953. However, any such member who is eligible for the Standby Reserve will be transferred thereto upon receipt after 1 January of his request for such transfer. (Secs. 205, 206, 210, 211, 212, 213, AFRA)

Are all reservists active?

No. Members on the "Inactive status list" of the Standby Reserve, members in the "Retired Reserve" and members assigned to the "Inactive National Guard" are not in an active status. As such they are not eligible for active duty for training or to earn retirement credit points or promotion. (Sec. 210, AFRA)

When can I transfer from the Ready Reserve to the Standby Reserve?

Except in time of war or national emergency declared by Congress, any member of the reserve components who is not serving on active duty shall, upon his request, be transferred to the Standby Reserve for the remainder of his term of service if qualified under one or more of the following conditions:

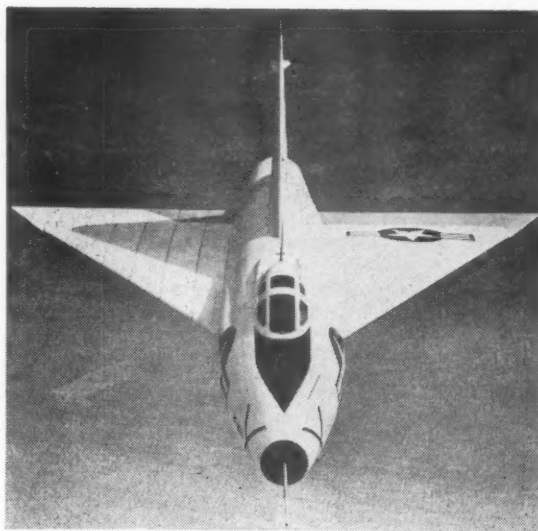

- (1) If he has served on active duty at any time for not less than a total of five years;
- (2) If, having served on active duty for a total of less than five years, he has satisfactorily participated in reserve duty in any accredited training program for a period which, when added to his period of active duty, totals not less than five years. (After 1 January 1953, such participation must be in an accredited training program in the Ready Reserve.)
- (3) If he has served on active duty for not less than 12 months between 7 December 1941 and 2 September 1945, and in addition, has served on active duty for not less than 12 months since 25 June 1950; or
- (4) If he has served as a member of one or more reserve components since 2 September 1945 for not less than eight years.

The above does not apply to any member of the Ready Reserve while serving under an agreement to remain therein for a stated period nor shall any member of the National Guard be transferred to the Standby Reserve without the consent of the Governor or other appropriate authority of the State, Territory, or District of Columbia concerned. (Sec. 208 f, g, and h, AFRA)

I am in the Ready Reserve, but am eligible to transfer to the Standby Reserve, and plan to request that action. At some future time I hope to be able to participate actively again. How can I transfer back to the Ready Reserve?

Contact your state Military District Head-

First head-on flight view of Convair's XF-92A research interceptor, which pioneered the world trend to delta wing aircraft. Photo was taken over the Mojave Desert where the aircraft is completing US-AF research at Edwards AFB. The XF-92A is forerunner of the supersonic F-102 recently ordered into production at Convair's San Diego Division. It is also announced that the Air Force has instructed Convair to prepare design studies for a projected multi-engined jet bomber capable of supersonic speeds.

Convair's Supersonic Bomber

The Air Force has asked the Consolidated Vultee Aircraft Corporation to prepare detailed design studies for a supersonic bomber.

An Air Force spokesman said no contract for the production of such a bomber has been awarded. Studies for future and improved models are constantly underway and must progress sufficiently for detailed cost studies to be made before any consideration is given to later production.

Some of these continuing studies relating to supersonic bombers are being made for the Air Force by other aircraft manufacturers, it was reported.

The Air Force has already ordered the B-52 long-range jet bomber into production by the Boeing Airplane Company Experimental and service test models of this plane were completed this year.

quarters at that time and the situation will be explained to you as it then pertains; the size of the Ready Reserve is controlled by law and training by funds authorized by Congress. Whether there is an appropriate vacancy in the Ready Reserve at the time would be the principal factor controlling whether you could be transferred to the Ready Reserve. (Sec. 205(b), AFRA)

Are the Ready Reserve and the Standby Reserve equally liable for active duty?

No. The Ready Reserve units or members are liable for active duty either in time of war or national emergency declared by the Congress or proclaimed by the President, while the Standby Reserve units or members are liable for active duty only in time of war or national emergency declared by Congress. Even in time of war declared by Congress, units and members of Ready Reserve must be ordered to duty before like units and members in the Standby Reserve. (Sec. 205, 206 AFRA)

Are members in the Retired Reserve liable for active duty?

Yes. If qualified, a member of the Retired Reserve may be ordered to active duty involuntarily, but only in time of war or national emergency declared by the Congress. (Sec. 207, AFRA)

I enlisted in the National Guard, and am exempt from the draft. If I re-enlist this year when my three-year enlistment ends, will I continue to be exempt from the draft?

A person who was a member of a National Guard unit on 1 February 1951 will be exempt from induction so long as he continues to be a member of such a unit and satisfactorily participates in scheduled drills and training periods. Re-enlistment so that service is continuous will continue the exemption in effect under the conditions stated. (Sec. 6(c) (1), UMT&S Act)

I am now in the Inactive Reserve; will provisions be made so that I can transfer back to an active status, presumably in the Ready Reserve?

Yes. Procedures are now being developed to govern transfers from an inactive to an active status. It is contemplated that a board of officers will determine each case on its merits with considerations being given to such factors as age, branch, length of service and prior interest in the reserve program. (Policy)

Is annual training required by law?

WWII Medical History

A 368-page work, the first in a series of 34 volumes on the history of the Army Medical Service during World War II, was published this week.

Commenting on the new volume, Maj. Gen. George E. Armstrong, Army Surgeon General, termed it "a physiological atlas of the wounded destined to take its place beside the finest works of medical literature everywhere."

Entitled "The Physiological Effects of Wounds," the book is based on battlefield data gathered by a board which studied severely wounded men in the North African-Mediterranean theater of operations during the war. Collection of data contained in the new text involved the first basic medical research every conducted by the Army on the front lines. Board members frequently worked under fire, examining seriously injured men only minutes after they had reached forward battalion aid stations.

In observing 186 severely wounded patients, most of them Infantrymen, the late Lt. Col. Tracy B. Mallory and his associates collected positive evidence of the enormous superiority of whole blood transfusions as compared with blood plasma. The group also made some of the first clinical observation of kidney shutting down, known medically as lower nephron nephrosis, a condition that had accounted for countless soldier deaths.

In addition to Colonel Mallory, the board included Lt. Col. Harry K. Beecher, now Professor of Research in Anesthesia, Harvard University Medical School, and Chief of the Anesthesia Department, Massachusetts General Hospital, Boston; Col. Florindo A. Simeone, now Professor of Surgery, Western Reserve University School of Medicine and Director of Surgery, Cleveland City Hospital, Ohio; Maj. Charles H. Burnett, now Professor of Medicine and Chairman of the Department of Medicine, Southwestern Medical School of the University of Texas; Capt. Seymour L. Shapiro, now Director, Biological Laboratory, Arlington Chemical Company, Yonkers, N. Y.; Lt. Col. Eugene R. Sullivan, now Chief of Chemical Laboratories and Director of Research Laboratory, Veterans Administration Hospital, West Roxbury, Mass., and Capt. Louis D. Smith, now Associate Bacteriologist, Veterinary Research Laboratory, Agricultural Experiment Station, Montana State College, Bosman, Mont.

The new volume will serve as a study text at the Army Medical Service Graduate School in Washington, D. C., and throughout the military medical services. Distribution is being made to all major medical libraries in the country.

The work will also be used by five universities as part of the material on national defense medicine which they are incorporating into their normal medical school curricula in a program sponsored by the military medical services and other agencies of the government. These universities are Cornell, California, Buffalo, Illinois and Vanderbilt.

The volume may be purchased from the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington, 25, D. C. at $3.50 a copy.

Marine Corps To Get Army ROTC Graduates

The Army disclosed this week that it has established a new policy which will permit Army ROTC graduates to accept appointment in the Marine Corps.

Qualified applicants who have completed or will complete Army ROTC instruction and the necessary academic effort, including at least a baccalaureate degree, between the first of last month and 23 April 1953, and become eligible for call to active duty with the Army, will be permitted to apply for appointments in the Regular Marine Corps.

The Marine Corps is currently expanding its Regular officer corps, the Defense Department said, "and will offer a substantial number of appointments to members of the Army ROTC."

The program was developed, according to Army Secretary Frank Pace, Jr., as "being in the best interests of the Armed Forces and national security." It is limited to this year's mid-term graduates. All major commanders and professors of military science and tactics have been urged to give the plan their support.

Qualifications for appointment of Army ROTC graduates in the Regular Marine Corps are generally the same as set forth for commissions in the Regular Army, except that applicants under this program must not have reached 25 years of age by 1 July 1953. Applicants must meet physical qualifications prescribed in the Manual of the Navy Medical Department which parallel Army requirements for appointment in the combat arms in the Regular Army.

Army ROTC personnel who have already received their commissions in the Army but who have not yet reported to active duty, and those who have not yet received Army commissions, may apply for the Marine Corps appointments. ROTC graduates who have received commissions in the Army and have already reported to active duty are not eligible.

Qualified ROTC personnel who desire appointment in the Marine Corps may make application through the professor of military science and tactics in charge of their unit, who will furnish them additional instructions and assist in forwarding their application.

Except for those detailed in the Corps of Engineers, Army ROTC graduates who complete training during the period from 1 Jan. 1953 to 23 Apr. 1953 who are not appointed in the Marine Corps, will be ordered to active duty with the Army in July 1953. Engineers will be ordered to active duty within 60 days following graduation.

Honor Willow Grove NAS

The city of Philadelphia this week officially recognized the outstanding achievement made by the Willow Grove Naval Air Station in winning for the second consecutive year the Navy Department's Edwin Francis Conway Memorial Trophy.

Certificates of Commendation were presented to the Air Station, commanded by Capt. John A. Moreno, and to three Philadelphia commanding officers of individual squadrons who were also awarded trophies for the excellence of their records made in the past year. Mr. Michael J. Byrne, Deputy to Mayor Joseph Clark and representing him on the occasion, presented the certificates on the stage of the Boyd Theater, 9 Dec., at the premiere showing of "Flat Top," story of an aircraft carrier and the predominately Naval Reserve aviators who manned her.

The Conway Trophy is the Navy's top award to the nation's finest air station among the 28 Reserve Training Units which comprise the Naval Air Reserve Training Command. Eight squadrons from the Command are also selected to receive the Noel Davis Award. Three of them are based at the Willow Grove Air Station: Fighter Squadron 931, commanded by Lt. Comdr. Richard J. Griffin; Transport Squadron 931, commanded by Comdr. Charles Josephs, and Patrol Fleet-Air Service Squadron, commanded by Lt. Comdr. Leonard D. Booth.

UNITED STATES ARMY

Army Has Space Vacancies But Officer Funds Short

Assistant Secretary of the Army Fred Korth said yesterday that although the officer strength is "far short of our actual space requirements," the Army has an officer over-strength because of a reduction in funds.

This situation has been reported frequently during recent months, but Mr. Korth made it official at Ft. Benjamin Harrison, Ind., in an address to graduates of the first Army course exclusively for Manpower Management Officers.

Assistant Secretary Korth reported that as part of the manpower conservation program the Army had reduced from 518 to 308 the number of enlisted MOS's.

"The entire enlisted MOS structure is currently under study by Army Field Forces," he reported, with the final report expected in the next couple of months. "It is anticipated that the conclusions will be far-reaching in their impact on the organization of the MOS structure and through the whole system of training," Mr. Korth added.

With regard to the officer strength problem, Assistant Secretary Korth stated: "The provisions in the current appropriation for pay purposes result in an officer over-strength for Fiscal Year 1953. This is so even though the officers we now have are far short of our actual space requirements. Attrition, coupled with reduced Officer Candidate School input, will operate from here on to help bring the officer strength within funds available. But this means another shortage—and a shortage again in people—not just spaces."

Mr. Korth paid tribute to the Adjutant General's Corps for developing and presenting the Manpower Control Officer Course for Department of the Army consideration.

P.L. 810 Retirements

The Army has announced the retirement under Public Law 810 of the following National Guard and Reserve officers. Each officer has reached the age of 60 and has completed 20 years creditable service.

Airdrop Supply

Increased utilization of airdrop for supplying troops beyond reach of normal supply routes was considered at an Army Quartermaster Corps conference on airborne supply, 11 and 12 Dec., at the Office of The Quartermaster General in Washington, D. C.

In calling the conference, Maj. Gen. George A. Horkan, Quartermaster General of the Army, pointed out that this method of supply, although proven in Korea, is still relatively new and has potentialities not yet fully realized.

Airdrop supply includes delivery of all types of supplies and equipment, both light and heavy, by parachute and, to a limited extent, delivery of small items by free-fall. Army Quartermaster Corps personnel are responsible for packing and rigging equipment for airdrop, and, when necessary, parachuting with the supplies to recover valuable Army equipment.

Those attending the conference included representatives of the Army General Staff, the Quartermasters of the continental Armies, the Army Field Forces, the Joint Airborne Troop Board, ports of embarkation, and service school for advanced training. The XVIII Airborne Corps and the 11th and 82d Airborne Divisions, were also represented.

Major purpose of the conference was to review important developments in airdrop techniques, particularly those tested in recent exercises by Quartermaster units of airborne divisions, and to delineate the increased ability of the Army Quartermaster Corps to provide this type of logistical support to combat troops.

A feature of the conference was an outdoor display of airdrop equipment, including demonstrations of parachute packing and heavy drop rigging techniques by a team from the Quartermaster School of the Quartermaster Training Command, Ft. Lee, Va.

STRESS ARMY HISTORY

General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, has told commanders that he wants new soldiers better indoctrinated in the history and traditions of the Service. He states that many military personnel "are not properly acquainted with the heritage and traditions of the United States Army or of the unit to which they are assigned," and calls for a continuing program aimed at increasing motivation and morale.

In Circular No. 100, the Chief of Staff comments that commanders are to insure the program is executed "in such a manner that personnel will be able to give prompt answers to questions concerning the history of their units."

Lower Torso Body Armor

A new experimental body armor item for combat troops, designed specifically to afford protection to the hips, abdomen and groin, has been developed by the Army Quartermaster Corps and will be tested by troops under fire in Korea.

Action to procure 1,000 of the new lower torso armor items is being initiated immediately by the Army Quartermaster Corps and it is expected that delivery to the Far East will be under way by 1 Feb. 1953.

The new lower torso armor is made of the same material as the Army QMC armored vest. It includes 12 layers of flexible, spot-laminated nylon duck, encased in a water-resistant vinyl layer with an outer covering of six-ounce nylon fabric and will give the same degree of protection to the lower torso as that now provided the upper torso by the Army's armored vest. The latter has been demonstrated under combat conditions to deflect approximately 65 per cent of all types of missiles and to reduce chest and upper abdominal wounds by about 60 per cent.

The new garment resembles boxers' shorts in design. It may be supported with suspenders worn under the armored vest, with the lower edge of the vest overlapping its top edge. It will be available in small, medium, and large sizes, with laces permitting overlapping adjustments on each side.

The lower torso armor covers approximately four square feet and weighs about four pounds.

Physical Exams

The Army has announced that due to operational conditions, the Commanding General, Eighth Army, has found it necessary to defer annual physical examinations as prescribed by AR 40-100 on officers and warrant officers assigned his command.

Commanders of installations to which these officers and warrant officers are reassigned were directed to have an annual physical examination accomplished on each such individual within 30 days after his reporting date unless exempted under paragraph 10c, AR 40-100.

Gen. Shepard Gets U. S. Corps

Maj. Gen. Whitfield P. Shepard, Commanding General of the 8th Infantry (Training) Division, Ft. Jackson, S. C., will succeed Maj. Gen. Roscoe B. Woodruff as Commanding General of the XV Corps at Camp Polk, La. General Woodruff will retire on 31 Jan.

Brig. Gen. Edwin L. Sibert, Commanding General of Camp Edwards, Mass., has been assigned to the United States Army Forces, Far East, Tokyo, Japan.

Brig. Gen. Earl S. Gruver, Executive Officer in the Office of the Army's Chief of Ordnance, Washington, D. C., will assume new duties with the United States Army, Europe, early in January.

Brig. Gen. William P. Ennis, Jr., Artillery Commander of the XVIII Airborne Corps, Ft. Bragg, N. C., has been transferred to the Office of the Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., with station at Ft. Bliss, Tex.

Brig. Gen. Howard E. Kessinger, Army Attache in London, England, will succeed General Ennis.

Brig. Gen. Thomas E. DeShazo, Artillery Commander of the 11th Airborne Division, Ft. Campbell, Ky., has been named to succeed Maj. Gen. George J. Richards as Chief of the Military Assistance Advisory Group in France. General Richards is also eligible to retire on 31 Jan.

Leaves FEC After 7 Years

More than seven years after landing with the first airborne occupation forces in Japan, Lt. Col. Ned W. Glenn has left Japan for reassignment to the United States.

Colonel Glenn's overseas service since 1939 probably makes him a strong contender for the "longest-away-from-home" championship of the U. S. Army. During the last 13 years he has served in Alaska (four years), the Philippines, Japan and southeast Asia—with two short tours of duty in Korea for good measure—and has spent only 18 months in the United States.

Navy Men Are Trained To Operate New A-Sub

Two Navy officers and 10 enlisted men have been hand-picked by the Navy for a course of instruction in a new type of sea duty—the operation of an atomic-powered submarine.

The group is expected to form the nucleus of an A-sub crew, and in addition its members will be able to instruct other future atomic submariners, as the use of atomic power in the Navy develops. At present, engines for two such submarines are under construction, and the General Dynamics Corporation of Groton, Conn., has been awarded construction of the submarines.

All have been assigned to the manager of the Schenectady (NY) Operations Office of the Atomic Energy Commission for duty in connection with the building of a submarine atomic power plant at the Knolls Atomic Power Laboratory there. The laboratory is operated for the AEC by the General Electric Company.

The special training, to run a year or more, will be given by Union College faculty and General Electric engineers and scientists.

The group will first take basic courses under Union College faculty, in mathematics, physics, thermodynamics, metallurgy and blueprint reading. These will be followed by more advanced courses in special aspects of nuclear power given by G-E scientists at the laboratory. Actual classwork began on 8 Dec.

All 12 of the men selected have served on submarines and intend to make the Naval service a permanent career. They range in age from 25 to 30. With one exception, all are married and have one or more children.

Lieutenants Carter and Carlisle are 1946 graduates of the U. S. Naval Academy. Both are 28 years old and are qualified for submarine duty.

Exercise "Southern Star"

Admiral Robert B. Carney, USN, Commander in Chief of Allied Forces, Southern Europe, announced this week that the North Atlantic Treaty Organization exercise "Southern Star," for the NATO

U. S. NAVY & MARINE CORPS

Southern European Command, will begin on 14 Jan. in Naples.

The exercise, he said, is expected to thoroughly measure the defensive readiness of the military forces of the NATO Southern European Command in terms of effectiveness, logistics, communications, organization and operational planning.

"Southern Star" will be a command staff conference designed to develop staff relationships and procedures in the chain of command. It will be attended by more than 200 Allied officers and observers including French, Greek, Italian, Turkish, United Kingdom and United States officers of the various commands and staffs under Admiral Carney's overall direction.

Waves Test New Shoes

A field trial is being made of two new types of shoes for Waves.

The Navy's women have been generally unhappy about the styles of both their oxford work shoes and the pumps which they wear for dress. Many Wave hospitalmen, who are required to be on their feet a good part of the work day, complained that the work shoes were too heavy and the heel was too high. The shoes, they said, blistered their feet. In some hospitals, Waves were permitted to wear loafer-type shoes, but this did not make for uniformity. The women wanted more attractive, more stylish and more comfortable shoes for both work and dress.

As a consequence, the Uniform Board has ordered a field test of two new shoe styles. Before it got under way, a large number of shoes in varying styles were sent to the Bureau of Personnel for perusal by the Wave Director, Capt. Joy Hancock. She, and other Waves in the Washington area, looked the shoes over and selected the oxfords and pumps which were considered most suitable.

One hundred pairs of pumps and 50 pairs of oxfords were made up by a leading shoe company and are now being worn by Wave personnel on a test basis. The oxford is a three-eyelet style with heels one inch high; it has a moccasin toe and a scalloped tongue. The pump has a moccasin insert with an elasticized gore in front and a small strap. The heel is 2-1/8 inches high.

Retire 19 Marine Officers

The Marine Corps this week announced the retirement of 19 officers including one USMCR officer, Col. Ralph J. Schiesswohl, who was promoted to Brigadier General.

Capt. Francis P. Sarubbi, USMCR, was placed on the permanent disability retired list, and 10 other officers were placed on the temporary disability retired list: Maj. Richard R. Frichette, Maj. Gale W. Roberts, 1st Lt. James W. Eshleman, USMCR, 1st Lt. William A. Moran, USMCR, 1st Lt. Austin S. Parker, 2d Lt. Douglass R. Annand, USMCR, 2d Lt. Winfield P. Fuller, CWO George E. Hynes, CWO Ben C. Key, and CWO Harry T. Mayes.

CWO Ferdinand J. Bergmann was placed on the retired list after completing more than thirty years of service.

Five USMCR officers were placed on the Honorary Retired List: Brig. Gen. Ralph J. Schiesswohl, Capt. Russell H. Bradley, 1st Lt. Ernest Hicks, 2d Lt. Donald F. Fitzpatrick and WO Abraham Felber.

Two USMCR officers were placed on the Reserve Retired List: Lt. Col. Abel E. LeBlanc and Maj. Earl T. Crawford.

USMCR Colonel to BG

A Marine Corps selection board this week named Col. Joseph R. Knowlan, USMCR, for promotion to brigadier general in the Marine Corps Reserve.

Colonel Knowlan is a member of a Philadelphia insurance inspection firm. During World War II he commanded the First Battalion, Eleventh Marines, on Guadalcanal, and later was in charge of the Marine Barracks at the Naval Air Station, Corpus Christi, Tex. In Apr. 1945 he was returned to inactive duty.

During World War I, General Knowlan had been a member of the First Marine Aeronautic Company.

Admiral and General Inspect Air Reserves

Rear Adm. Daniel V. Gallery, jr., and Brig. Gen. Frank H. Lamson-Scribner, commanders of Naval Air Reserve Training and Marine Air Reserve Training, respectively, were in Washington, D. C., on 6 December to inspect Anacostia, D. C., air reservists.

In a conference at the National Press Club the two officers reported that neither Service will involuntarily recall any more fliers during fiscal 1953. General Lamson-Scribner said the Marine Corps will have released all of its involuntary recalls by September 1953.

Queried by a JOURNAL reporter as to whether the new canted deck concept for aircraft carriers will change the methods of training Air Reservists, Admiral Gallery said "definitely" it would. He added that the new carrier deck, which will be angled to provide a clear landing area for planes, "will open up a whole new prospect for carrier aviation." He said use of the deck will enable the Navy to "operate bigger and heavier aircraft."

At present, the first shipboard installation of the new deck is being made on the USS Antietam to permit the Navy to make full-scale fleet tests. Admiral Gallery said the new canted deck is also "being built into the USS Forrestal."

The two officers were asked about the "four Air Forces" statement of a top Defense official, but both denied any knowledge of such a set-up within the Defense Department. Admiral Gallery said he was aware of "only one Air Force, and that is the United States Air Force." He said he recognized no "duplication or over-lapping" of functions. "The Navy needs the planes it has to do the Navy job—which is control of the seas."

The new Chief of Naval Air Reserve Training said the Navy is not meeting its quotas for pilots at the present time. He noted that "Flying used to be a very glamorous business, but now it is becoming so commonplace that it is losing its glamor and is not attracting the youth as it once did."

The Anacostia inspection was the first of 28 which Admiral Gallery and General Lamson-Scribner will make at air reserve training units throughout the United States. Also taking part in the inspection of the Anacostia units were Vice Adm. John D. Price, Chief of Naval Air Training; Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air John F. Floberg and Navy League President Frank A. Hecht.

2 Marines Win Medal of Honor

Two Marines were posthumously awarded the Congressional Medal of Honor late this week bringing to a total of 27 the number of Marines who have won the Nation's highest award for heroism in Korea.

Corporal Jack A. Davenport of Mission, Kans., and Kansas City, Mo., won the Medal for smothering an enemy grenade with his own body to save a fellow Marine.

Lt. George H. Ramer of Lewisburg and Loysville, Pa., was awarded the Medal for covering the withdrawal of his platoon after leading it in an assault on an enemy-held hill. Wounded at the time, Lieutenant Ramer was killed when the enemy overran his position.

Regular USMC Appointments

Appointments in the Regular Marine Corps may be extended to Aviation Cadets who complete 18 months' service during calendar year 1953, Headquarters has said.

The Naval Aviation Cadet Act of 1942 provides that Aviation Cadets who are commissioned in the Marine Corps Reserve may be considered for such appointments during the calendar year in which they complete 18 months' service by 30 June.

Headquarters said the 1952 program was implemented as a part of the recently completed officer integration program.

"E" Plaques Awarded

The landing ship medium rocket USS LSMR 517 this week became one of the few ships in the Atlantic Fleet to win the Battle Efficiency Plaque for the fourth consecutive time.

Vice Adm. F. G. Fahrion, USN, Commander Amphibious Force, U. S. Atlantic Fleet, presented plaques to the LSMR 517 and to the landing craft utility USS LCU 1462 at the U. S. Naval Amphibious Base, Little Creek, Va.

Rear Adm. Rufus E. Rose, USN, Commander Amphibious Group Two, presented the plaque to the attack cargo ship USS Alshain (AKA-55), berthed at the Norfolk Naval Base.

In winning the plaque four consecutive years, the officers and men of the LSMR 517 were told by Admiral Fahrion it is evident they understand the award is a "continuing process requiring teamwork" throughout the years.

The rocket ship's commanding officer, Lt. James L. Rothermel, USN, accepted the plaque from Admiral Fahrion.

Ralph D. Lilley, Chief Boatswain's mate, USN, received the plaque for the LCU 1462, which he has commanded for three years.

Capt. Richard W. Peterson, USN, skipper of the Alshain, accepted the award for his vessel. Admiral Rose cited the Alshain as the "best of her type in the Atlantic Fleet Amphibious Force."

responding to the present W-1, W-2, W-3 and W-4 categories.

The entire problem is said to be highly complex. Since a long study is in prospect, Department of Defense officials are particularly anxious that warrant officers be assured that no immediate changes are likely.

If the Warrant Officer Bill is pressed in the forthcoming Congress, warrant officers will not be disturbed. If, however, the bill does not have strong Pentagon support, warrant officer moral will be seriously affected, particularly in view of the current Limited Duty Officer study.

No Coast Guard Representation

The Defense LDO Staff Group is certain to hear protests from the Coast Guard, which is not represented in the membership, as made available to THE JOURNAL this week.

The only association of warrant officers is one composed of Coast Guard personnel. This group has been particularly active in legislation affecting warrant officers of all the Services.

Commission Lawyers

The Navy has called for applications from eligible male officers serving on active duty for appointment as legal officers of the Regular Navy. Those selected will be appointed only in the grade of lieutenant (jg), with a special duty officer designation and will fill one of ten existing vacancies.

Each applicant must hold a law degree from a law school accredited by the American Bar Association and must be a member of the bar of a Federal Court or the highest court of a state or territory of the United States or the District of Columbia. In addition, they must be 21 but not 32 at the time of appointment as legal officers and they must meet the physical requirements for original appointments in the Staff Corps.

Commanding officers have been authorized to forward applications from eligible officers serving in their command. All applications must be received in the Bureau of Naval Personnel not later than 31 Jan. 1953.

Advertisers in the Army Navy Air Force Journal support the Armed Forces and are familiar with their requirements.

Early Release For Marines

The Marine Corps will release from active duty between now and 20 December, all officers and enlisted Reservists who normally would be eligible for release this month or during January.

The schedule of releases for other personnel, contained in Marine Corps Memorandum 42-52, will continue to apply. Headquarters said this schedule "was predicated on providing early release to a maximum number of personnel for the holiday season."

Overseas commanders have been authorized to return Marines eligible for early release this month to the Continental United States for separation "utilizing Government air transportation where required."

Adm. Biggs to COMSERVPAC

Rear Adm. Burton B. Biggs, USN, has relieved Rear Adm. Francis C. Denebrink, USN, as Commander Service Force, U. S. Pacific Fleet. The change of command ceremonies were held at Pearl Harbor on board the fleet oiler USS TOLOVANA.

COMSERVPAC, as a major type commander, is principal logistics agent for the Commander in Chief, U. S. Pacific Fleet.

Admiral Denebrink has served as COMSERVPAC for the past 35 months. His next assignment will be Commander Military Sea Transportation Service, Department of the Navy, Washington, D. C.

AF Muster-Pay Report

More than 90 per cent of Air Force personnel claims for mustering-out pay have been received and processed by 1 Dec. at the Air Force Finance Center, according to announcement by Col. Richard L. Scott, the Center's Commanding Officer at Denver, Colo.

A total of 103,624 claims representing over $21,182,000 from Air Force veterans discharged since June 1950 have already been paid. For several weeks processing has been at the point where only seven days are required between receipt of the claim at the Center and final payment to the veteran, providing applications are in order.

Eligible Air Force veterans who have as yet not submitted their requests for mustering-out payment may continue to do so, Air Force Finance Center officials stated. Applications, together with Report of Separation, DD Form 214, should be mailed to the Military Pay Division, Air Force Finance Center, 3800 York Street, Denver, Colorado.

If the veteran's original Form 214 has been lost, duplicate may be secured from the Chief, Demobilized Personnel Records Branch, Air Adjutant General's Office, 4300 Goodfellow Boulevard, St. Louis, Missouri.

AF Warrant Officer Reg.

The Air Force has released AFL 36-49, 20 Nov., which announces interim policies and procedures for permanent and temporary promotion of warrant officers until new legislation is enacted. Here are pertinent excerpts from the regulation.

Policy:
a. Permanent Promotion. Permanent promotion to chief warrant officer as authorized by the Warrant Officer Act of 1941 will continue on an annual basis.

b. Permanent Pay Grade Advancement. Permanent advancement to a higher pay grade is not authorized except for warrant officers junior grade (W-1) selected for permanent promotion to chief warrant officer (W-2).

c. Temporary Pay Grade Advancement. Temporary pay grade advancement will be made from time to time to fill existing vacancies. Only individuals serving as warrant officers will be considered for temporary (USAF) warrant officer pay grade advancements.

General:
a. After completion of ten years active Federal service as a warrant officer and/or commissioned officer, the following personnel are eligible for consideration by a selection board convened at Headquarters USAF for permanent promotion to the grade of chief warrant officer:

(1) Permanent warrant officers junior grade serving as warrant officers.

(2) Selectees (individuals having no service under permanent warrant officer appointment).

(3) Vacatees (vacated permanent warrant officer appointment to serve as a commissioned officer). Details governing consideration for permanent grade promotion will be announced periodically by Headquarters USAF.

b. Selectees and vacatees selected for permanent promotion to chief warrant officer will be furnished evidence of entitlement to the higher grade.

c. Unless budget or other limitations dictate otherwise, regular warrant officers serving in a commissioned status who subsequently revert to warrant officer status will be entitled to appointment in the pay grade in which they were originally placed on the initial four-pay grade distribution. Regular warrant officers advanced to a higher temporary pay grade by actions subsequent to 1 April 1951 will hold the higher grade only as long as Air Force requirements so dictate. Selectees and vacatees are entitled to warrant officer appointment only in the pay grade held or selected for on or before 1 April 1951.

d. Temporary warrant officer promotions will be made from among Regular warrant officers serving as warrant officers, temporary USAF warrant officers, and Air National Guard warrant officers on active duty without regard for component. Warrant officers advanced temporarily from pay grade W-1 to pay grade W-2 will be promoted concurrently to temporary chief warrant officer (USAF). Criteria, numbers, and method of accomplishing temporary grade advancements will be announced periodically by Headquarters USAF.

e. Temporary USAF warrant officers have no right to reappointment as warrant officers once their temporary warrant officer status is vacated. This is applicable not only to present temporary USAF warrant officers, but also to those individuals who formerly served in a temporary warrant officer status. No adjustments will be made in dates of rank to credit service as a former temporary warrant officer.

Gen. Kepner Retires At 60, Name Two-Star As Successor

Lt. Gen. William E. Kepner, USAF, who will be 60 years of age on 6 Jan. 1953, has given up assignment as Commander-in-Chief of the Alaskan Command, and will retire in February.

His successor is Maj. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, USAF, who undoubtedly will be given a third star. The Air Force commander in Alaska also commands Army and Navy activities in that area.

General Kepner, who has over 40 years of service, including duty as an enlisted man in the Marine Corps and as an Infantry officer in the Army, is the No. 2 officer on the Air Force permanent promotion list, being outranked only by General John K. Cannon, USAF, chief of the Tactical Air Command.

General Kepner, although having 40 years' total service, did not have 35 years' promotion list service until 14 June 1952. He has been a permanent major general since 5 Dec. 1942, and so is retiring with 35 years' service and 5 years in permanent grade, as provided in the Officer Personnel Act of 1947.

Gen. Edwards to Retire

In addition to General Kepner, another senior Air Force officer will retire in February. He is Lt. Gen. Idwal H. Edwards, USAF, Commanding General, Air University, Maxwell AFB, Ala.

General Edwards will be 58 years of age on 5 Apr. 1953.

Gen. Twining's Status

In addition to General Kepner and General Edwards, the Air Force Vice Chief of Staff reportedly will be retired in November 1953 upon completion of 5 and 35. General Twining would not reach the statutory retirement age of 62 until 11 Oct. 1959.

The Army policy is to retain lieutenant generals with 35 and 5 until attainment of age 60. The Air Force apparently with a requirement for more youth in its officer ranks, is imposing the 3 and 35 retirement provision regardless of the age of the officer.

"More AF Per Dollar"

The Air Force by emphasizing management improvement in its Air Materiel Command, will show cost reductions of $12,489,530 during fiscal year 1953, Lt. Gen. Edwin W. Rawlings, commanding general, predicted this week.

These reductions, General Rawlings said, will make possible the purchase of other materials essential to the Air Force's expansion program.

The cost reduction program was instituted by General Rawlings under the slogan, "More Air Force per Dollar." By means of incentive awards, posters and other publicity, all AMC employees, both military and civilian, have been urged to submit suggestions for less costly methods of doing their jobs.

The suggestions, too, have been command-wide. Five hundred and eighty-two suggestions were submitted by the eight Air Materiel Areas for a total saving of $3,508,269. The nine Air Force supply depots submitted 196 suggestions for an annual saving of $777,646, and the six procurement districts reported 191 ideas for yearly savings of $1,297,720.

Headquarters and Wright-Patterson AFB, Ohio, jointly submitted 29 suggestions for the highest savings per idea. These 29 suggestions are expected to result in $6,905,895 in savings during fiscal 1953.

The ideas have ranged over a wide field. Streamlining of reports has been conspicuous, principally because AMC, as the logistics arm of the Air Force is concerned with a great deal of complicated paper work. Other suggestions dealt with more efficient use of personnel by job audits and improved methods of handling mechanical operations.

ARDC Conference

A representative group of leading civilians in the air development field, from industry, universities and research laboratories, will meet with Air Research and Development Command personnel on 18 and 19 Dec. in Baltimore, Md., for a two-day briefing on present and future requirements of the Air Force.

Announcing the conference, Lt. Gen. Earle E. Partridge, Commanding General of the Air Research and Development Command, said this week that this action is being taken to inform fully those individuals closely associated with Air Force research and development activities on the requirements that must be met to keep American air power the best in the world. Only security cleared people are being invited to attend the classified presentations.

Under Secretary of the Air Force Roswell L. Gilpatrick will attend the two-day session. Presentations will be made by key members of General Partridge's staff on such matters as air defense of the United States, strategic air requirements and tactical support of surface forces.

AF Officer Elected

Col. B. E. Nowotny, Chief of the Personnel Services Division at USAF Headquarters, has been elected Chairman of the Armed Forces Section of the American Recreation Society for 1953.

Other officers are Lt. Comdr. John W. McGhee, USN, and Miss Almira Quinn, Sixth Army Headquarters, vice chairmen.

Albuquerque District Engineer

Col. Lynn C. Barnes has been assigned as Albuquerque, N. M., District Engineer, replacing Col. Charles H. McNutt, who has been assigned as Chief of Staff of the 6th Armored Division, Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo.

Colonel Barnes has been with the Far East Command since February, 1950, as Chief, Engineering and Operations Division, Engineer Section, General Headquarters. He will assume his new duties in January.

ARMY TECH. SERVICE PROMOTIONS

Under Secretary of the Army Earl D. Johnson went before a House Expenditures Subcommittee on 5 Dec. to report on progress made in supply management. In his prepared statement, which won praise from Subcommittee members, Mr. Johnson made this observation relating to promotion of supply officers:

"Insofar as promotion goes, there is a central control designed to assure that officers of the Technical Services receive recognition comparable to their combat arms contemporaries. However, it must be in all frankness recognized that dynamic combat leaders receive more recognition than supply officers of equal capacity, just as the halfback receives more headline recognition than the linemen who contribute materially to the halfback's success."

"It would be a sure way to disaster for this Nation to rely on the fleet we had at the time of Japan's surrender to keep our sea lanes open in the unhappy event that hostilities at sea should be expanded from its present limits."—ADMIRAL WILLIAM M. FECHTELER, CHIEF OF NAVAL OPERATIONS.

The Never-Ready Army. Official confirmation this week of reports that a new "stretch-out" is being applied to the production of tanks and trucks for the ground forces gives rise to grave fears that the U. S. Army is receding from, rather than going toward the goal of combat readiness set up following the Red outburst in Korea in 1950.

Year by year the budgets and appropriations have made cut backs necessitating further extensions of the date by which the Army would be ready. Only last June, during Senate Committee consideration of '53 appropriations, Secretary Pace and General Collins both warned of the dangers inherent in the reductions then proposed. Secretary Pace pointed out that the cuts imposed in the budget, even before it reached Congress, would mean an extension from fiscal year '53 to '56, "at the earliest," of the date by which the Army would be combat ready. As to the further slashes made by the House, General Collins declared flatly "The military consequences of these proposed cuts are beyond any risks that I can recommend as Chief of Staff of the Army." The current appropriations act sets 1,552,000 as the personnel strength to be attained by the Army at the end of this fiscal year. However, as the result of administrative actions by the Bureau of the Budget and the Department of Defense, it is now evident that the Army will fall short of this goal by 30,000 to 40,000 men. Next year, under current plans, there will reportedly be a further retrogression setting the Army back perhaps 100,000 from its target strength.

The new stretch-out in production will postpone by one year—to '55—the time by which the Army will have the required number of combat vehicles.

It has already been made abundantly clear that the stretch-out and drag-out have been applied to the Air Force, so that the date for attainment of the 143 wings, deemed by the Joint Chiefs of Staff to be essential to the national security, has been put further off in the future. The same is true of the projected strength of Naval aviation, while the personnel strength of the entire Navy is suffering from progressive reductions similar to that of the Army.

There is no evidence available to the public that there is any less need now than there was in 1950 for the attainment of the minimum goals then considered mandatory for the preservation of our nation and our position in the free world. On the contrary, it seems clear that the need has intensified.

These are problems which will face the new administration. General Eisenhower and Mr. Charles E. Wilson, whom he has designated to be his Secretary of Defense, can not anticipate an easy solution. They can be expected, however, to look at the situation with a fresh and vigorous viewpoint and to bring such efficiencies and economies as may result from their practical military and production backgrounds. But the desired state of readiness of all of our Armed Forces can not be reached without the appropriation by Congress of the required funds and its release by the Bureau of the Budget for expenditure.

Jet Airliners And Air Power. The Military Air Transport Service has taken an initial step looking toward the development of jet air transports in this country. This is particularly important in view of the long lead Great Britain already has on the rest of the world through her six years of work on jet airliner projects culminating in her current commercial operation of the "Comet."

British development was government subsidized—a course which our government has been reluctant to take—while our aircraft industry has been devoting its efforts largely to military needs. So substantial is the British lead that one U. S. air line, Pan American World Airways, has placed orders with the British deHavilland firm for the delivery of three of the Mark III Comets by 1956.

It can not be said, however, that the field has been neglected in this country. In spite of the terrific costs, three of our large manufacturers, Lockheed, Consolidated Vultee, and Boeing, have been working on designs. The Allison Division of General Motors, largest manufacturer of jet engines, has, at its own expense, been making actual flight tests of a Convair 240 which they purchased and substituted turbo-prop engines for the conventional reciprocating power plants. The Allison Turbo-liner is still under test and will provide valuable data for further development.

The MATS project, reported by Lt. Gen. Joseph Smith, USAF, now in the form of "system study contracts" with Lockheed, Consolidated, and Boeing, will provide governmental support for further development and doubtless, in time, will lead to further contracts for the construction of jet transports for military service. Adaptation of these to commercial use could easily follow.

In Mahan's famous study he defines sea power as being made up of the fighting fleet, the merchant marine, and bases from which to operate. Air power is much the same. Commercial aviation, both from the standpoint of the operation of air lines and the manufacture of commercial aircraft, is an integral part of the air power of a nation. If MATS, by fostering the development of jet air transports for its own use, can further the progress of our commercial air lines, it will be making a double-barrelled contribution to the National Defense.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—

The Secretary of War at his press conference last week took cognizance of the services conducted by United States Army chaplains in Westminster Abbey when he said: "I have been informed that the Dean of Westminster gave complete jurisdiction over Westminster Abbey yesterday to the American Army, who conducted non-sectarian services there for members of our Expeditionary Force. This unprecedented gesture is eloquent proof that Britain, which cherishes its traditions, knows how to break them in the name of friendship."

50 Years Ago—

Among bills introduced in the Senate is one to establish a corps of trained women nurses in the Navy. It provides for one superintendent, ten assistant superintendents, forty senior nurses, and twenty junior nurses, all of whom must be unmarried graduates of a training school of recognized standing.

85 Years Ago—

From report of the Secretary of the Navy: "The general peace which has prevailed throughout the civilized world has called for no interposition or active operations on our part. The display of a naval force has been sufficient to suppress threatened difficulties, and in every quarter American interests have been respected and American rights observed."

Pride, Devotion, Love of Service

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Three cheers for Lt. Col. (Not Old—Not Young) whom you quoted in the 29 Nov. issue. The entire Army would do well to include subject matter such as he discusses in training schedules and in on-the-job training for officers until every last one comes to an understanding and appreciation of this spirit.

Ever since the end of World War II, I have been appalled at the growth of this "me-firstism" in our Service. I have come into contact with an alarming number of otherwise excellent officers who allow the question of when they will receive their next promotion to occupy too much of their attention. I, too, would like to see a wider growth and manifestation of "that substantial cushion of pride, devotion and love of service" throughout our Army.

Had there been time to inculcate this spirit throughout our expanded Army in World War II, the sources of the great multitude of complaints of the "B-bag"-type would not have grown up, and a vast number of our discharged GI veterans would have a better attitude toward the Army. Should we not profit in this direction from our mistakes, and experiences in World War II? Why shouldn't our commissioned officers lead the way in this?

I have never written to THE JOUR-

NAL before, but in publishing the "me-firstism" letter I feel that you have struck pay dirt worthy of a comment.

RECENT COLONEL
(NOT OLD—NOT YOUNG)

Enough of the Far East

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

In 1939, I volunteered for service in the Philippine Islands. I arrived there in February of 1940, and served in the Southwest Pacific area until early in 1944, a total of 52 consecutive months, the last 28 of which were after Pearl Harbor. Following this extended overseas tour I was fortunate in having a long tour of duty in the states.

When it became apparent that I was due for a second overseas tour I relaxed and enjoyed the pleasant feeling that my destination would be Europe, Panama, or some such place. I was bolstered in this feeling by the knowledge that for years I had indicated such choices on my annual preference card. But, Lo and Behold! I get orders to Okinawa. I arrive in Okinawa in January 1950. At that time it took approximately one year of service there before dependents could join. After eight months in Okinawa I am sent to Korea where I am wounded in action. Five months later I am discharged from a hospital in the states and receive a rather nice assignment.

At last, I feel, the great white father who looks after all dogfaces and ex-dog-faces is beginning to smile on me. I proudly tell my wife that we will spend a couple years on this assignment and then get that long awaited for assignment to Europe or Panama. I continue to indicate these choices on my annual preference card. After a little less than two years on my assignment I succumb to the call of foreign places and volunteer for overseas assignment. I listed, in order of preference, practically every place where an American Service Man can be sent. At the bottom of my list I place "Far East Command." I possess the usual MOS of an infantry captain—nothing fancy—unit commander, tactical; unit commander, non-tactical; supply; Information and Education Officer; Administrative Officer. With these common MOS, two consecutive Far East tours to my credit and being a volunteer for Europe, Panama, Trieste, Pacific, etc., I figure that I have it in the bag. It would take someone with a weird sense of humor to order me again to the Far East.

What's the point of all this conversation? What am I driving at? Well, if you are ever over in Tokyo or Seoul look me up. I leave in April to start my third consecutive tour in the Far East.

CAPTAIN, INFANTRY

BUDGET cuts, manpower shortages and most importantly the selection of General Motors President Charles E. Wilson to be Secretary of Defense probably will result next year in an increasing transfer of Armed Forces research and development activities to civilian scientists and engineers.

It is known that the Pentagon has had under study for some time the problem of turning over to research laboratories and industrial facilities many functions now performed by the technical services.

Mr. Wilson, as an engineer and industrialist, can be expected to give such plans experienced and sympathetic consideration. He may decide to give this matter high priority attention after taking office next month.

One of the main reasons that the incoming Secretary is certain to examine the relationship of the military technical services and civilian science and industry is a public statement made by the Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff on this subject.

General of the Army Omar N. Bradley is on record as advocating that the Armed Forces "turn more of our problems over to the research laboratory, to the engineers of industry and thus tap the broadest knowledge and know-how our nation can provide."

General Bradley has plenty of support within the Services for his point of view. Those who agree with him maintain that much money and manpower could be saved for primary combat duties if civilians performed more research and development for the Services.

But General Bradley's position by no means has unanimous support. Many officers concerned with this matter maintain that the Armed Forces will be hurt if research and development is de-emphasized, with a concurrent loss in prestige to those in the technical services.

General Bradley, when he spoke in April to cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, emphasized that he did not want "to deprecate the skill and knowledge, the pride of accomplishment, of the technical services," but he added it is a fact "that in many instances pride of invention and development have prevented us from turning over the military problem to the civilian scientist and engineer, giving them a free hand."

Said General Bradley: "We have tried to do our research and development when the better solution would have been to encourage the application of the broader knowledge of industry to the problem areas."

With his first-hand knowledge of how industry can work with and for the Armed Forces and with General Bradley's remarks in support, Secretary of Defense-designate Wilson surely will demand detailed presentations by all sides on this controversial issue. It will be surprising if General Bradley's views are not endorsed by the former General Motors chief.

"Wider Horizons," Says SecNav.

The Navy League of the United States celebrated its 50th anniversary last week-end with a gala dinner at the Statler Hotel in Washington, D. C., and was advised by Secretary of the Navy Dan A. Kimball to "raise some steam."

Secretary Kimball told League members that "as the Navy changes, and as our mission broadens, the Navy League must widen its horizons accordingly." He said on his recent trip to Europe he had seen England's Navy League and "its size, influence and prestige as compared to our own organization convinced me that we have a long way to go."

Mr. Kimball noted that he was not criticizing the League's efforts, that it "has done an excellent job." But, he said, "We need more of your kind of people. The membership should be expanded." He told the members, "we've got to raise some steam. . . . We need to overhaul our immediate plans to help the Navy through some nasty riptides I see just ahead. We need long-range plans, too, measured in terms of years."

The Navy Secretary told the gathering "when we ask you to support the Navy, we don't ask you to do it by belittling the sister services." He said unification "has worked out quite well" and that he thinks "it will continue to work well."

Unification Changes

Mr. Kimball added, however, that he also believes "the need for some additional improvements have become apparent and will be made by the fresh approach shortly to be brought to bear on the basic problems." He said, "For the welfare of the whole country and of the three services, however, existing deficiencies must be recognized, discussed, remedied and recommended to Congress by the responsible authorities within the Defense Department and not fought out in the newspapers by over-anxious zealots of any service."

He added, "It is easy to understand why strong people have very decided opinions about the national defense structure. Naturally each thinks his own service is best. They would be less than human if they did not feel this way, and without it morale and esprit de corps would perish."

He warned, however, "in obtaining an over-all objective of adequate national defense at minimum cost, we must be careful not to destroy by noisy and emotional argument the thing we are trying to build."

Mr. Kimball, who is slated to leave his cabinet post next month, said his 45 months of association with the Naval Establishment "have been richly rewarding. I should be less than appreciative of the honors which have been conferred upon me, if I were to neglect any opportunity to help the service which has given me such loyalty and genuine cooperation, or to diminish my interest in the patriotic and unselfish efforts of the Navy League."

No Controversy

The President of the League, Frank A. Hecht, joined with Mr. Kimball in soft-pedaling any attack on the Air Force. He said "We believe that a public controversy between the Navy and Air Force would serve only the interest of Joe Stalin."

His remarks were of particular interest because of the fact that in a press release published before the convention opened last week, the League stated "In view of recent attacks on the Navy and naval aviation by Roswell L. Gilpatric, Undersecretary of the Air Force and by the Air Force Association, much interest has been manifested in the proceedings [the Golden Jubilee Dinner] and in Hecht's remarks [scheduled for that dinner]."

Earlier, in a message to League members, Mr. Hecht warned that in his opinion "the Navy faces a critical period in the next session of Congress and there is a need for all of us to work together to stave off what we believe to be irreparable harm to our national defense establishment."

He said "There is increasing pressure within the Pentagon for further steps toward the concept of a vertical organization" and that he is "convinced that any steps in the direction towards the Prussian General Staff organization plan will be harmful because of the fact that the Army and the Air Force do not fully understand the importance of sea power."

At that time, he also noted that "The Navy has suffered during the past five years from being the low man on the Totem pole in the Pentagon and it has had little success in Congress with its program for replacing out-dated ships and for modernizing our carriers and providing adequate numbers of new jet aircraft."

Mr. Hecht, who was re-elected President of the League, presented the organization's Award of Merit to Lt. Comdr. Frederick J. Lewis, MSC, for his part in developing the bullet proof vest now in use in Korea.

NATO Military Chiefs Confer In Paris

WITH General J. Lawton Collins, Army Chief of Staff, pinch hitting for General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, the North Atlantic Treaty Organization's Military Committee met this week in Paris to review NATO progress and make plans for the future.

The Committee heard reports from General Matthew B. Ridgway, USA, NATO Supreme Commander, and Admiral Lynde D. McCormick, USN, Atlantic Commander, that present forces are not adequate to meet Soviet aggression.

Meantime, a report was made public this week by Senator Tom Connally (D-Tex.), Chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, on his inspection trip of Western Europe.

Senator Connally devotes a chapter of this report to a review of the defense situation, which provides a valuable review of NATO achievements and shortcomings during 1952.

Here is the text of Senator Connally's remarks on the military situation:

Show Solid Results

"The North Atlantic Treaty nations are now showing solid results in the development of effective armed forces, although the force goals for 1952 set by the North Atlantic Council at its Lisbon meeting in February will probably not be fully reached by the end of this year.

"There can be no question that the larger countries, given the means, can field, and in fact already have fielded, substantial forces for NATO, while at the same time the smaller countries, remembering the devastation of World War II and their more limited resources, are achieving real progress toward making their fair contribution in arms and men to the united effort.

"Generally, the more serious problems which the NATO nations have faced and against which their achievements are to be measured include the following:

"(a) Insufficient military funds;
"(b) Shortages of essential items of combat equipment;
"(c) Difficulties in providing the men, money, and material for the continued training of reserve personnel and reserve units;

"(d) The present lack of supporting units to service combat forces in sustained operations;

"(e) Shortages in experienced instructors and qualified maintenance personnel.

"With few exceptions, the NATO country forces have had or are rapidly developing the ability to receive, maintain, and utilize all MDAP equipment now programmed, and the Military Assistance Advisory Groups (MAAG's) are working to overcome remaining deficiencies in this respect. Every effort is made to avoid sending equipment, even though programmed, to a country until it is ready to utilize it properly.

"Almost without exception, training, particularly of recruits, has markedly improved throughout, due in large part to the influence of the MAAG's, improved courses of instruction, the enthusiasm of returning MDAP trained personnel and lengthened terms of service in many countries. Improvement in morale has been steady, both among the people generally and in the Armed Forces. The still strong Communist parties in France and Italy continue to give concern, but overall there is increasing support for the NATO concept of an integrated Western Defense.

Country Reviews

"Within available resources depleted by two world wars, and despite 10 years of austere living conditions, the British people are making a superior defense effort and would unquestionably fight and fight well to maintain their security. The effectiveness of their Army, Navy, and Air Force is limited, not by factors of morale, command, or training, which are excellent, but by shortages in equipment and in logistic resources. Thus, the military build-up has been conditioned by scarce raw materials, by delays in machine-tool deliveries, by skilled labor shortages, but above all by the stresses and strains upon the British economy and the continuing difficulties of maintaining economic recovery and stability at home.

Report on Belgium

"The Belgians are an industrious and creative people who strongly support the North Atlantic Defense Program. Within this prosperous nation the Communist Party is small, though troublesome, and there is little serious danger from subversive elements. While the Belgian Army is considered well trained and organized, the Navy has existed only since World War II and a modern effective Air Force is still in its infancy. Factors affecting the development of these forces have included difficulties in maintaining sufficient effective personnel on active duty and consequently in providing the necessary training in modern methods and weapons and a limited logistics system for sustained combat support.

"The plans and programs Belgium has drawn for its forces show its determination to meet NATO commitments, but achievement will continue to depend upon the availability of adequate equipment and supplies from all sources.

"With a population of 300,000, Luxembourg clearly can bear only a small portion of the military effort of NATO. At present the country has no air force units, and, of course, no navy. Moreover, the Army could only be effective for NATO purposes when operating with other forces, which could provide necessary support. However, within such limitations of size and resources, the Luxembourg ground units can make their contribution to NATO, can absorb and properly utilize programmed MDAP equipment, and can be supported within the capabilities of this prosperous country.

Netherlands Forces

"The effectiveness of Netherlands forces is steadily increasing, but again the country has been faced with the recurring problems of equipment shortages and limited logistic resources, which are being overcome to some degree by a steady economic recovery. The Netherlands has also been faced with the problems of raising sufficient active duty personnel to man cadres and provide proper training.

"The Danes have shown increasingly strong support for the NATO concept, and the Danish Government has taken progressive steps to increase the effectiveness of its armed forces. Individual conscript training is thorough, complete, and effective, but shortages of equipment and limited personnel and facilities for advanced instruction have been retarding factors. The Government has also encountered serious problems in achieving an adequate manpower build-up and in providing necessary support units and rear-echelon facilities. As these problems are overcome, Denmark can achieve within its resources a larger defense contribution.

"Historically, France has been one of the major land powers of Europe, with (Please turn to Page 457)

SERVICE NEWS AND GOSSIP

A Secretary's Indoctrination—Secretary of Defense-designate Charles E. Wilson has had no leisurely indoctrination for the post he will fill after 20 January. He has been introduced to his new job in whirlwind inspections at the payoff point—in Korea. There, he saw Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps units in action. Then, with General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, JCS Chairman, and Admiral Arthur W. Radford, USN, Pacific Fleet Commander, Mr. Wilson held rewarding conferences at Pearl Harbor this week. Upon his return to the United States, the incoming Secretary next will plunge into detailed briefings at the Pentagon. His keen sense of organization will make it possible for Mr. Wilson to integrate quickly his first-hand observations in Korea with the mass of information he has accumulated and which he will continue to gather for the next month from Secretary of Defense Robert A. Lovett and other top Defense officials.

Thus, the Nation can be assured of enlightened continuity in defense leadership. Throughout the Armed Forces this will inspire confidence that efforts to develop and maintain a long-range defense program will not be handicapped because of changes of administration.

Moreover, the Armed Forces now know that as a result of his trip to Korea and his conferences elsewhere in the Pacific, Mr. Wilson has gained an insight into the particular problems of men and women in uniform. Early in his career as Secretary of Defense, Mr. Wilson will be called upon to make important decisions regarding pay, promotions, housing, family welfare and other matters affecting the efficiency and morale of the fighting forces. To his studies of these problems the Secretary-designate will bring the reflection of his battlefield indoctrination.

Political Absentees—The absence of Secretary of Defense-designate Wilson and General Bradley from the political discussions held by President-elect Eisenhower aboard the USS Helena is interpreted by Pentagon observers as an indication of how there will be a bend-over-backward effort to keep the Pentagon and politics apart in the forthcoming administration.

Secretary Wilson, like his immediate predecessors, General of the Army George C. Marshall and Secretary Robert A. Lovett, will undoubtedly strive to keep defense entirely separate from partisan politics.

General Bradley, despite his close personal friendship and longtime military association with the President-elect, will restrict his activities exclusively to that of a military advisor. Therefore, following the inspection in Korea and before military talks were resumed in Hawaii, he was deliberately away from the President-elect's party.

Aftermath of a Speech—A Department of Defense official has revealed that the speech delivered by Under Secretary of the Air Force Roswell Gilpatric before the American Society of Magazine Editors and published in full in THE JOURNAL of 29 Nov., was not properly cleared prior to its delivery. The speech was notable for Mr. Gilpatric's statement that "perhaps General Jimmy Doolittle was right when he said that while this country should have an Army, a Navy and an Air Force, it only needs one of each."

The Navy has taken particular exception to Mr. Gilpatric's remarks. A strong response was prepared by Secretary of the Navy Dan Kimball for delivery last Friday at the 50th anniversary banquet of the Navy League. However, Secretary Kimball's statement was toned down in its actual delivery.

In the light of the apparent dissatisfaction of the Department of Defense and the Navy with Mr. Gilpatric's speech, it is of interest to recall a statement made by General Hoyt S. Vandenberg, Air Force Chief of Staff, on 12 Mar. 1952. In a message to major commanders of the Air Force calling for caution in inter-Service relations, General Vandenberg said that "ill-considered or extreme utterances tend to raise justified resentment among the personnel of our sister Services, to becloud the issue, and to turn the matter into a so-called inter-Service row."

Army-Wide Association—During recent weeks, there has been renewed discussion concerning merger of various Army associations. The Infantry Association and Field Artillery Association were combined in 1950 into the Association of the U. S. Army. Now, there are reports that the U. S. Antiaircraft Association will join the Association of the U. S. Army.

The latest issue of the Anti-Aircraft Journal contains a ballot on which the members of the U. S. Antiaircraft Association are to vote yes or no on merger with the Association of the U. S. Army. Lt. Gen. Lyman L. Lemnitzer, Acting President of the Antiaircraft Association, says the Executive Council supports the merger.

The possibility of the Armor Association joining the merger is likely to be discussed at the 64th annual meeting of this group at Ft. Knox, Ky., on 30 Jan. 1953. The problem is discussed in the current issue of Armor, the Association's official publication. The editorial in Armor states that support should be given to the idea of a single Army-wide organization with a single publication as its primary instrumentality. "But—we do not feel that such an organization and magazine should be imposed upon one of the existing branch Associations and journals, or be composed of a number of them," the Armor editorial observes.

The editorial concludes: "The Armor Association and Armor stand ready to support an Army-wide organization to the limit; but it must be one which is all-embracing in purpose as well as in name; one which does not seek to eliminate existing branch Associations and magazines, whose contributions to National Defense—to the branches, the Army, the Nation—has long been established and is well confirmed."

General Michaelis Recovering—There were welcome reports this week that Brig. Gen. John H. Michaelis, USA, Commandant of Cadets at the U. S. Military Academy, is recovering from a series of operations made necessary by wounds suffered in World War II. A hero of early fighting in Korea, General Michaelis is a former aide of President-elect Eisenhower and served at SHAPE before being assigned to the important post at West Point.

Need Basso Profundo—The Air Force has told its Personnel Services Officers and Band Superintendents of a critical need. In January, the Singing Sergeants, famed AF musical group, will lose the services of its basso profundo. S/Sgt. Kenneth Grafton is being discharged.

The basso profundo vacancy is the first to occur in the Singing Sergeants, whose director is Lt. Robert L. Landers.

MEMO

To Journal Readers

...The Pentagon expects the return of President-elect Eisenhower from the Pacific to be followed almost immediately by an announcement on GEN. VAN FLEET'S status. He's due to retire next month, 11 days after the Inauguration, but he CAN BE RETAINED in service. The decision is up to Gen. Eisenhower. Betting on retention of the 8th Army Commander will grow with each day's passage. If he's to be retired, OTHER SENIOR OFFICERS must be shifted; besides, there's the need to notify U.N. officials. This takes time.

...Although press reports have emphasized prospective ARMY MANPOWER CUTS, the Navy is known to be unhappy over similar reductions in personnel strengths in the '54 budget. Marine Corps strength probably will be little changed. The Air Force WILL BE INCREASED as new wings are added.

...Maj. Gen. Merrill B. Twining, USMC, may have to be replaced as TECHNICAL DIRECTOR of the Sarnoff Manpower Commission because of illness. He is undergoing treatment at the Bethesda, Md., Naval Hospital. With an AF officer, Col. Charles M. Seebach, as Deputy Director, and the Commission Chairman a brigadier general in the Army Reserve, a NAVY FLAG OFFICER may be named Technical Director.

...The Armed Forces Medical Policy Council has under study a proposal to PAY CIVILIAN PHYSICIANS and hospitals for emergency care in maternity and infant cases where such medical service cannot be obtained by military personnel without distinct hardship. It's a serious morale problem—one which SENATOR LEHMAN has promised will be brought up in the 83rd Congress.

...Retirements of NATL. GUARD AND RESERVE officers at age 60 with 20 years' creditable service are increasing steadily. Latest statistics show that benefits under P.L. 810 are being paid to 4766 by the Army, 380 AF, 526 Navy and 26 Marine Corps. Most retirements are reported in field grades.

...Dr. Vannevar Bush of the Carnegie Institute has told a Congressional subcommittee that the JCS CHAIRMAN should have power to select his own staff, with no Service to assign any officer to the Joint Staff without the Chairman's approval. Congress likely WILL HESITATE to give the Chairman such power, spelled out in legislation.

...Reserve medical officers who served during WWII and who are now on INACTIVE STATUS are banding together to prevent their recall before the call of doctors and dentists who were deferred during WWII, for one reason or another. It's resulting in some INTRICATE POLITICKING in civilian medical circles.

...A major factor in the COST-OF-LIVING increases for military personnel since Korea is the frequency of reassignment. A recent Army survey discloses that the AVERAGE OFFICER in the U.S. was transferred every 18.1 months.

...The Air Force is doing everything possible to increase the number of its ROTC graduates who apply for FLYING TRAINING. Statistics show that of 4357 ROTC graduates who were commissioned in May and June, only 659 were undergoing flying training in the period from July to October. Changes in the ROTC curriculum have been made to STIMULATE INTEREST in flying.

...As The Journal went to press, the Defense Dept. apparently was having a difficult time making up its mind about the DRAFT CALL for Feb. The call is usually made early in the month. For example, the Jan. call was issued on 3 Nov., one day before the election. Selective Service needs TWO MONTHS notice to deliver the necessary manpower.

■ FT. SILL, OKLA. Fort Sill expects to receive its first large WAC detachment since World War II after the first of the year. Eventually the detachment may comprise approximately 200 women soldiers. At present there are only two WACs at Sill, both lieutenants.

Sixty-nine new lieutenants were commissioned this week during commencement ceremonies for OCS Class 29. Among the graduates was Lt. Robert A. Mason, a son of author F. van Wyck Mason. The elder Mason served as an Army officer in two World Wars, the last time as a colonel on the staff of SHEAF.

Another graduate, Lt. F. G. Garrett, was interned in Santa Tomas prison camp for three years and two months during World War II. His father was in charge of mines on the island of Luzon when the war started.

Honor man of the class was Lt. Paul E. Bear. Designated as distinguished military graduates were: Lt. John R. Lewis, Lt. William L. Ponder, jr., and Lt. Wellington J. Strickfaden.

Col. George R. Buell has arrived at Fort Sill to assume the duties of provost marshal. He served in Germany for three years on occupation duty as Chief of the Customs Control operations in EUCOM. Prior to that assignment, he was Commandant of the Military Police School, Carlisle Barracks, Pa.

Guests at the meeting included Mrs. William Oscar Blount, Dean of Women, Mary Hardin Baylor and Miss Florence Bergen-dahl, director of the Choralliers.

■ FT. LAWTON, WASH. Sixteen members of the Teen-agers club recently received appointments as Junior Sheriff Deputies at the club meeting. Objective of the Deputies is to aid in the reduction of juvenile delinquency on and off the post and to assist law enforcement officers to the extent of reporting infractions of the law by juveniles and adults.

Col. Garnett H. Wilson, post commander, spoke to the group and in turn introduced Judge Ward Roney of the Superior Court, who administered the Oath of Office. King County Sheriff Harlan Callahan presented members, both boys and girls, 13-18 years of age, with badges and identification cards.

Instrumental in planning this organization, the first in King County and the second in the State of Washington, are Lt. Col. Joseph Knizek, Provost Marshal, Lt. James J. Condon, chairman of the Youth Center, and M/Sgt. Earl W. Buckner and M/Sgt. Edward E. Malone, both of the Armed Services Police Detachment.

Officers have been appointed to head the organization and a SOP formulated by which they will conduct their operations. Captain of the Deputies is Don Potter, son of WOJG and Mrs. Leland L. Potter. "Lieutenant" Pat Connor, daughter of Col. and Mrs. E. H. Connor, jr., and "Lieutenant" Larry Malone, son of M/Sgt. Edward E. Malone, are the other officers.

During the business meeting, Mrs. Lawton, honorary president, extended the Season's Greetings to members, and Mrs. E. R. Petzling, president, expressed appreciation to members for their efforts in the recent post-wide drive for Xmas bundles for Korean war-stricken orphans. Mrs. W. J. Rosengren was chairman of the post-wide drive, which was sponsored by the Women's Club.

Guests for the afternoon's entertainment were three Girl Scouts from Troop #33 with Mrs. John N. Shaffer as leader. The girls elected to represent the Troop were Joyce Thompson, Ruth Ellen Cantrell and Beverly Collins. The Cub Scouts were also represented with one boy from each den.

A group from the elementary school band presented a musical program of Christmas Carols. Two fifth grades attended, accompanied by their teachers, Mrs. Vernell Thomas and William McCoy. A sixth grade group, accompanied by Mr. Bryan Crutcher, also attended.

■ WILLIAM BEAUMONT AH, EL PASO, TEX. A theme-combination of Yuletide and The Old South marked the December meeting of the WBAH Women's Club, with luncheon and entertainment planned in honor of Mrs. Walter C. Royals, honorary president, who was presented with a gift as a token of remembrance, and an autograph book inscribed by club members. Colonel Royals, commanding officer of WBAH, will retire from active service at the end of this year, and he and Mrs. Royals will return to their home in New Orleans.

Following the shrimp creole luncheon, which was served on holiday-decorated tables, a program of old southern melodies and Christmas favorites was presented by the club choral group, "The Harmony Six." Miss Beulah Johnson, of the American Red Cross staff at Beaumont, sang several Negro spirituals. She was accompanied by Mrs. Maurice C. Davidson at the piano.

The choral group includes Mrs. Carl T. Dubuy, Mrs. William F. Foster, Mrs. Walter K. Long, Mrs. Robert Steuerwald, Mrs. Carl D. Walley, Mrs. John M. Wilson, and Mrs. Roy R. Shoaf, accompanist.

Reserve Promotion Plan

the 1 Jan. effective date of the Armed Forces Reserve Act.

Will Parallel OPA

Insofar as is practicable, the regulation covering Civilian Components promotions will parallel the Officer Personnel Act of 1947. Congress has stated that, wherever possible, promotion regulations for Regular officers and for officers of the National Guard and Reserve should be uniform.

Thus, the proposed regulation will provide for mandatory consideration for promotion after specified years of service. There will also be provisions for forced attrition, essential to insure a vitalized officer organization.

As approved by the Section Five Committee, the plan calls for the Department of the Army to specify annually the number of officers needed in each grade to meet planned mobilization requirements. This will determine the promotion pace and will mean adequate flexibility to meet changing needs.

The mandatory consideration after specified years of service will, on the other hand, guarantee career opportunities for promotion in the National Guard and Reserve.

If there are no last-minute changes, the regulation will have an introductory section defining terms and giving other preliminary data, and then will be divided into two main sections, one for the Army Reserve and the other for the National Guard of the United States.

It is obvious that such a division is necessary, since the National Guard, when not on active duty, is a State organization, whereas the Reserve is at all times in Federal status.

These are the essential provisions of the regulation, as reviewed and approved by the Section Five Committee.

Army Reserve

The regulation will provide for both centralized and decentralized selection procedures. The Department of the Army is given responsibility for advancement of male officers to the grade of colonel, WAC officers to lieutenant colonel, Army Nurse Corps officers to major and lieutenant colonel and Women's Medical Specialist Corps officers to major.

To protect promotion rights of enlisted personnel and warrant officers on active duty who hold Reserve commissions, the Pentagon retains responsibility for their promotions in the Reserve.

Army and overseas commanders will have responsibility for promotion of male and female officers to grades below those cited above.

Mandatory Consideration

Paralleling the Officer Personnel Act of 1947 will be a requirement that regardless of whether or not there are vacancies, each male non-unit officer in active status in the grade of first lieutenant, captain, or major must be considered for promotion prior to the time he will complete, respectively, 4, 7, and 7 years of promotion service in grade. However, rather than run these years of service on a cumulative basis as in the OPA, there is an initial promotion and consideration which is based on both time in grade and years of commissioned service.

The years of commissioned service required for initial consideration, in addition to the time in grade specified above, are:

|---------------------------------|----|
| To First Lieutenant | 3 |
| To Captain | 6 |
| To Major | 12 |
| To Lieutenant Colonel | 17 |
| To Colonel | 19 |

Since many officers were commissioned in the grade of captain or major at an advanced age and do not have this service, an officer will be given the option of counting his actual commissioned service or subtracting 25 from his age and counting this figure in lieu of actual commissioned service.

A non-unit officer is one who is in active status but who does not hold a T/O&E or T/D unit assignment (including mobilization designees).

Unit Officers

In order to be eligible for promotion,

a unit officer must occupy a position vacancy and must have completed the following minimum years' service for promotion purposes in grade:

|---------------------------------|---|
| As Second Lieutenant | 3 |
| As First Lieutenant | 2 |
| As Captain | 4 |
| As Major | 4 |
| As Lieutenant Colonel | 3 |

Selection Board Action

All promotions, except those to first lieutenant (as is the case for Regular officers) will be made by selection boards. The Section Five Committee agreed with the plan that at least one member of the board be a Regular officer, but that at least half of the members be Reserve officers.

The procedures which will be followed by the selection boards will duplicate the action of selection boards which consider officers on active duty for promotion, both Regular and non-Regular.

If a second lieutenant is found qualified by appropriate authorities, he will be promoted automatically to first lieutenant after three years of service.

Fill Vacancies

The Army will authorize convening of selection boards, as necessary, to fill grade structure vacancies. Promotions will be made in order of seniority.

Vacancies in approved T/O&E and T/D units, not including mobilization designations, will be filled by promoting the best available officers. However, to provide desired uniformity at the same time recognizing outstanding abilities, the regulation, as now formulated, will set forth specific limitations for such "best available" promotions in units.

Method of Selection

Promotions to captain, major and lieutenant colonel normally will be made on a "fully qualified" basis. The "best qualified" method will be used for promotion to colonel.

Comprehensive precautions are prescribed to prevent inequities because an officer may move, return to active status, or be incapacitated for service as a result of physical disability.

Forced Attrition

A second lieutenant not qualified for promotion will be discharged prior to the date on which he would complete three years' commissioned service.

As is the case for Regular officers up for permanent promotion, two consecutive pass-overs for a Reserve officer will mean discharge or transfer to the Retired Reserve.

Another method by which there may be forced attrition will work like this. When there is an excessive number of officers in any grade who have completed 30 years' commissioned service or 20 years of satisfactory Federal service for retirement, a board will be convened at the Pentagon to consider all non-unit officers of that grade who have completed such service.

Maximum Ages

A major provision of the new regulation sets maximum ages for Reserve officers, as follows: male colonels, 58, instead of 60 as at present; and lieutenant colonels and below, 55. This will permit older officers to remain active in lower grades, since age ceilings for the ranks below lieutenant colonel are removed entirely.

National Guard

The National Guard section states that selection and promotion of officers, not in active service, are responsibilities of the States. However, each officer who is promoted will be examined by a Federal Recognition Examining Board.

Prerequisites to Federal recognition in a higher grade will include requirement that the candidate be in an active status and have completed at least the following minimum years' service for promotion purposes in grade: three years as second lieutenant; two as first lieutenant; four as captain; four as major; and three as lieutenant colonel.

If these service requirements are not met, it is possible for an officer to be promoted if he has served creditably in a position vacancy for 12 months and is qualified according to a Federal Recognition Examining Board. Only one promotion is possible under this proviso, and that probably would be in company grade.

Maximum ages for National Guard officers are the same as those for Reserve officers, 58 for colonels and 55 for lieutenant colonels and below.

However, the Secretary of the Army is authorized to continue Federal recognition for some National Guard officers until age 60, namely those assigned to a State Headquarters or Headquarters Detachment.

Provision is made that an officer of the National Guard who transfers to the Army Reserve will be eligible for advancement to the highest permanent grade, not above colonel, previously held in the Army or any component thereof.

Each National Guard officer who transfers to the Army Reserve likewise will be assured the same opportunities for promotion as other officers of the Army Reserve of similar grade, branch, category, promotion service in grade and commissioned service.

Obituary

Capt. Charles G. Duffy, USN

Capt. Charles Gavin Duffy, USN, former Washington newspaperman and public information officer on the staff of Admiral Robert B. Carney, Commander in Chief, Allied Forces Southern Europe, died 10 Dec. of a heart attack in Naples, Italy. He was 53 years old.

Captain Duffy worked for the Associated Press; the New Bedford, Mass. Standard; the Hearst papers in Washington and Boston and, finally, with the Washington Times-Herald. He was night managing editor of the Times-Herald when he returned to active duty in the Navy in April 1942.

First duty for Captain Duffy during World War II was a brief assignment in the Office of Public Relations in the Navy Department. Four months later, he was ordered to duty as officer-in-charge of Public Relations, Fourteenth Naval District, Honolulu.

In June 1943 he was transferred to the post of Public Relations Officer with Naval Forces, Northwest African Waters. While in this assignment he served in the USS Mayrant in the Sicilian Campaign; the USS Ancon and USS Philadelphia at Salerno; the USS Plunkett at Anzio and the USS Catoctin for the invasion of Southern France.

Captain Duffy received a Letter of Commendation with Combat "V" for outstanding services as Public Relations Officer on the staff of the Commander Eighth Fleet during a period of almost continual action against the enemy in the Mediterranean in 1943 and 1944.

The Captain was ordered to Public Relations duty at the Advanced Headquarters of the Commander in Chief, U. S. Pacific Fleet. He continued in that assignment until released from active duty on 23 September 1945.

Returning to active duty in July 1946, he served as Public Relations Officer, Third Naval District, in New York City until 15 January 1949, when he reported to the Navy Department for duty as Special Assistant to the Chief of Public Relations.

When hostilities started in Korea, Captain Duffy was ordered to Tokyo as Public Information Officer on the staff of the Commander in Chief, Naval Forces, Far East. Five months later, in November, 1950, he was sent to London to serve on the staff of the Commander in Chief, U. S. Naval Forces Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean. From that post he was ordered to duty as public information officer, Commander in Chief, Allied Forces Southern Europe.

Captain Duffy began his naval career on 24 April 1917, when he enlisted in the U. S. Naval Reserve Force. He served in an enlisted status until he was honorably discharged, 26 April 1925. On 8 March 1938, he was enrolled in the Naval Reserve Force as a lieutenant. He was a commander at the time of his release from active duty in 1945. He returned to duty the next year in the rank of Captain, USNR. He transferred to the Regular Navy in that rank on 17 Dec. 1948.

Surviving are the widow, Mrs. Marie Sullivan Duffy of 4203 Harrison Street, N.W., Washington, D. C., who is a patient at the National Naval Medical Center, Bethesda, Md., and two sons, Charles G. Jr., and Paul G. Duffy.

the League members that the newly developed hydro-ski may reduce the need for construction of land air bases. He said the ski, which is still in the experimental stage, is unlike bulky pontoons since it is fully retractable and offers no resistance to the airstream.

Vice Adm. Richard L. Conolly, President of the Naval War College, also addressed the luncheon meeting, and later Rear Adm. B. L. Austin, Director, International Affairs Division, Office of the Chief of Naval Operations, spoke on "Sea Power and International Affairs." Vice Adm. Laurance T. DuBose, soon to become Commander of the Eastern Sea Frontier, discussed "Manpower and Morale in the U. S. Navy."

Admiral William M. Fechteler, Chief of Naval Operations, addressed the Golden Jubilee Dinner along with Secretary Kimball and Mr. Hecht. He noted that "The Navy and the Navy League are like any happily married couple celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. Mutual pride and admiration are combined with a feeling of achievement and regard for each other's apparent indestructibility."

Three top-ranking retired officers were elected to the board of directors of the League: General A. A. Vandegrift, former Marine Commandant; Fleet Admiral Chester Nimitz and Admiral Louis E. Denfeld, both former Chiefs of Naval Operations.

NATO Military Chiefs

a long tradition of national military service upon which to rebuild the strong forces which the French people deeply desire today. Although the Communist Party still swings a strong voting bloc, it has suffered serious set-backs during the past months, and potential for subversive activity has been seriously weakened. It may be noted that the French High Command has selected some of its finest troops to man the highly mobile, well equipped and trained Republican Guard companies which have the mission of suppressing fifth-column activities.

"The French have a superior mobilization system and the availability of adequate manpower is not a problem in France as it is in certain other countries. The major factors which have delayed the build-up and condition the effective use of French forces include:

"(a) The severe drains of the Indochina campaign on both equipment and trained manpower.

"(b) Difficulties of the Government in facing up to the economic problems which must be solved if the maximum military effort is to be made.

"(c) Lack of critical equipment and of sufficient military funds.

"(d) Slender logistic resources to support sustained operations.

"French forces have the ability to receive, maintain, and utilize MDAP equipment programmed for delivery if French budgetary support is adequate. There can be no doubt that deliveries to date have raised the combat potential of all three French services, and that training conducted under the MDA program, both in Europe and in the United States, has added markedly to the French ability to conduct their own schooling in modern methods and weapons in the future."

H-25 Helicopter Acceptance

Maj. Gen. Earle Standlee, MC, USA, Surgeon for the Office, Chief of Army Field Forces, Ft. Monroe, Va., Col. Felix S. Bambace, Medical Section, and Capt. Nelson A. Mahone, Jr., Research and Development Section, represented Army Field Forces at the Acceptance Inspection for the Piasecki H-25 Helicopter on 8 and 9 Dec. The inspection was held at the manufacturer's plant in Morton, Pa.

Seventy of the helicopters are under procurement at present. One has already been delivered to Army Field Forces Board No. 1, Fort Bragg, N. C., for service tests. The remaining 69 were considered by the Inspection Board at Morton.

O. K. Warehouse Space

Construction of more than 4,000,000 square feet of new warehouse space at nine supply depots throughout the Air Materiel Command has been approved by the Defense Department.

Latest construction approved for the Fiscal Year 1952 includes the San Antonio Air Materiel Area, earmarked for 480,000 square feet of added warehouse space; the Mobile and Oklahoma AMA's, 400,000 square feet each; San Bernardino AMA, 216,000 square feet; Griffiss Air Force depot, Rome, N. Y., 160,000 square feet, and Topeka (Kans.) AF depot, 40,000 square feet.

This, coupled with approval already granted to Warner Robins (Ga.) AMA for 1,200,000 square feet, to Wilkins AF depot for 800,000 square feet and to Gentile AF depot for 480,000 square feet, brings the total of new warehouse construction for the Fiscal Year 1952 to 4,176,000 square feet. Estimated cost will be approximately $35,000,000.

AMC officials said contracts will be let shortly for the latest-approved construction and that all projects should be completed by next fall. The hike in warehouse space throughout AMC was dictated by the ever-growing stockpile of supply items demanded to back up a rapidly expanding U. S. Air Force.

The new construction will raise to more than 39,000,000 the total square footage of covered warehouse space controlled by AMC throughout the country.

Army Officials Tell Details of New Stretch-Out in Procurement of Tanks and Trucks

The Army this week released details concerning plans for a new stretch-out in major procurement, particularly affecting medium tanks and 2½-ton trucks. The stretch-out, officials said, will spread deliveries over longer periods of time.

Production of medium tanks will be reduced about 45 per cent of the original goal set for the Spring of 1954 and there will be about a 22 per cent reduction in output of light tanks. Equipment goals will not be changed, Army officials said, but the deliveries will be extended over a longer period of time.

The following is the text of the Army's report on the production outlook.

Some manufacturers of medium tanks and 2½-ton trucks will be phased out of production schedules toward the end of 1953. With some leveling off in actual production to be expected during Fiscal Year 1954, beginning 1 July, 1953.

This is in line with the over-all production policy of the Secretary of Defense, as announced in 1951. This policy places principal reliance for industrial preparedness on production lines in being, rather than on the accumulation of completed equipment.

In general, as the leveling off time arrives, Government-owned plants will be slowed down first, allowing private contractors to continue production.

The Army emphasized that no reduction in the total amount of equipment being purchased is involved, but rather a rescheduling of deliveries.

This decision to cut back is not based on any change in the international situation. Should a change in the international situation occur, or a more extensive effort be made in Korea, the existence of these production lines operating at minimum sustaining rates will mean that normal loss of time required to meet new demands will be substantially reduced. This is implicit in the production philosophy under which the decision to cut back was undertaken.

Production of the Patton 48 Medium Tank will continue at somewhat reduced rates. This, with the completion of the M-47 Medium Tank Program, will affect plants in Delaware, Michigan and New York.

The Chrysler Delaware Tank Plant at Newark, Del., and the Grand Blanc Tank Plant near Flint, Mich., which is operated by the Fisher Body Division of General Motors Corporation, will continue production of the Patton 48 Tank at slightly reduced schedules.

The Ford Motor Company Tank Plant at Livonia, Mich., will continue production of the Patton 48 Tank at slightly reduced rates, gradually phasing out of production toward the end of 1953.

The American Locomotive Company at Schenectady, N. Y., which was scheduled to initiate production of the Patton 48 Tank by the end of 1953, will not be brought into production on this tank. This company, now producing the M-47 Medium Tank, will complete its production schedule of this vehicle toward the end of 1953.

The American Locomotive Company and the Government-owned Detroit Tank Arsenal, the latter now operated by the Chrysler Corporation, will discontinue medium tank production at about the same time with the completion of the M-47 Medium Tank Program. A quantity of M-47 tanks will be transferred from the American Locomotive Company to Chrysler Corporation to permit completion of production by the two plants at about the same time.

The stretch-out in the production program of the 2½-ton military cargo truck will affect plants in Indiana and Michigan.

The Truck and Coach Division of General Motors Corporation, Pontiac, Mich., and the Reo Motors Company, Lansing, Mich., will continue production of 2½-ton trucks at slightly reduced rates.

The Studebaker Corporation, South Bend, Ind., will discontinue production of 2½-ton trucks by the end of 1953.

The phasing down in procurement plans will have no effect for several months. The cut-backs involved are in accordance with decisions reached during the recent review of the budget estimates for Fiscal Year 1954 by the Secretary of Defense.

The exact time of the cut-backs announced today, which are implicit in this policy, could not have been predicted last year, since production had not been firmly established. A year ago the decision would have been premature, since production schedules had not yet been met, and it was uncertain that real production had been or was about to be attained.

The underlying purpose of this policy is to attain and maintain an industrial state of readiness over as long a period as we are faced by the possibility of communist threat. Therefore, an essential part of the plan is to maintain the production base as far as possible, even if the assembly lines are not producing.

To that end, it is expected that when the military end item is being produced simultaneously by both commercial manufacturers and by Government-owned plants, the Government-owned plants will generally be closed first. The virtue of the Government-owned plant is that when it ceases production, it can be put into mothballs and reactivated more easily if the occasion demands.

When it is necessary to discontinue commercial production lines, every effort will be made to leave Government-owned tools in place when this can be done at a reasonable cost to the Government. Otherwise, the Army-furnished and owned tools will be withdrawn and stored in Army warehouses ready for reinstallation if an emergency should necessitate the reactivation of production lines. The existence of such mothballed capacity to produce and machine tools in storage gives a great measure of industrial readiness, especially when compared with the situation in 1950, when the production of military-type items had reached a virtual stand-still.

In 1950 great quantities of machine tools used in World War II had been largely dissipated after the war. The machine tool industry was reduced to a low state of effectiveness.

Many factors enter into the selection of the plants which are to be phased out of production, in addition to their status as commercial plants or Government-owned plants. The relative cost of manufacture as between different plants, the potential capacity to produce, the relation of the manufacturer to the responsibility for the design of the item, all have a part in shaping the decision. Further, the Army considers to the maximum extent possible such factors as the needs of small business, distressed areas, and the desirability for minimum disruption in the lives of nearby communities.

Redesignate QM Center

The Quartermaster Center at Ft. Lee, Va., has been redesignated The Quartermaster Training Command.

The new Training Command absorbs many of the training missions formerly handled by the Office of the Quartermaster General in Washington, and will result in the moving of some elements of the Quartermaster General's office to Fort Lee. These will probably consist of the Training Branch of the Personnel and Training Division; and the Intelligence Branch of the Administrative Division.

Under the reorganization, Maj. Gen. H. L. Peckham, post commander, will assume the responsibility of the training of Quartermaster units not only at Fort Lee, but also at Quartermaster Depots and at non-quartermaster stations, including those of the Organized Reserve Corps throughout the continental United States. He will also take charge of the establishment of training standards and doctrines, advising as to the state of training of Quartermaster units in overseas areas.

Three new positions will be added to Fort Lee's headquarters staff, including a deputy commander, deputy chief of staff, and a deputy chief of staff (comptroller). According to Fort Lee officials, the reorganization will be carried out in two separate phases. The first involves the certain adjustments in command and staff responsibility at the post, utilizing existing personnel. The second phase is the assumption of functions previously handled by the Office of the Quartermaster General.

Tank Modification Plant

Plans for construction of a $3,100,000 Tank Modification Plant at Newark, Del., have been announced by the Army.

The new plant, which will be operated by the Chrysler Corporation, will become an integral part of the Chrysler Delaware Tank Plant. The Army anticipates that it will be in initial operation by 1 April 1953 and in full operation by 1 July 1953.

The Army said the new plant will be used for making final installation of on-vehicle equipment and any modifications which may be required on all tanks produced in the Delaware Tank Plant. It was also explained that the new tank plant facility will be used to prepare tanks for shipment in such condition as to be ready for immediate use in the field.

First F-84F Delivered

The first plane of a new series of high-speed swept-wing jet fighters—F-84F Thunderstreaks—to come off the production line at Republic Aviation Corporation's plant at Farmingdale, N. Y., was accepted in brief ceremonies 3 Dec. by Under Secretary of the Air Force Roswell L. Gilpatric.

Mundy I. Peale, president of Republic, certified to Mr. Gilpatric that the airplane had passed all company and Air Force trials, and Mr. Gilpatric officially accepted delivery. A flight demonstration by Russell "Rusty" Roth, Republic test pilot, followed the ceremonies.

The Thunderstreak is an advanced development of the Thunderjet fighter-bomber series. Military security permits merely the statement that the new plane is in the over-600-miles-per-hour class and is capable of long-range performance. In addition to its normal armament of six .50-caliber machine guns and ammunition, it can carry a greater external armament and fuel load than previous models of the F-84. Four guns are mounted in the nose and one each in each wing root.

The "F" is also being equipped with in-flight refueling equipment and will be capable of operations similar to the ocean-hopping performance of its predecessor model, the F-84G. The current "F" is powered by the J-6S Sapphire jet engine designed by the English firm, Armstrong Siddeley, Ltd.

The "F" has a wing span of 33 feet 7 inches, is 41 feet 9 inches long and measures 14 feet 4 inches high at the rudder tip.

Air Force tests were flown by Capt. Harold Collins, Maj. Charles Yeager, Maj. Richard Johnson and Brig. Gen. Albert Boyd. Project officer for the USAF is Lt. Col. W. B. Sellers, and C. R. Kramer is Republic's project engineer.

New WAC Director Named, Succeeds Colonel Hallaren

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., has named Lt. Col. Irene O. Galloway as Director of the Women's Army Corps, to succeed Col. Mary A. Hallaren on 3 Jan.

The law provides for only one colonel in the WAC, so apparently Colonel Hallaren will revert to the rank of lieutenant colonel.

The Army announced no assignment for Colonel Hallaren, WAC Director since May, 1947, but there are reports she will be given an important overseas duty.

Simultaneously, it was announced that Lt. Col. Emily C. Gorman, WAC Staff Advisor, Second Army, Ft. George G. Meade, Md., will become Deputy Director of the WAC. She will replace Lt. Col. Mary Louise Milligan, whose assignment to Europe has been announced.

Colonel Galloway, who becomes the fourth Director of the WAC, assumed command of the WAC Training Center at Fort Lee, Va., on 24 Nov. 1952. Her replacement will be announced later.

Prior to that assignment, Colonel Galloway was WAC Staff Advisor for the European Command, from July 1948 to October 1952. Before going to Europe, she served in the Office, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, Personnel, at the Pentagon.

subject of its instructional mission. In short, its preaching is practiced.

The School is an Air Force responsibility and as such the Air Force administers and pays the bills. Headquarters USAF has delegated this responsibility to TAC, and USAFAGOS is directly under TAC Headquarters. The instructional staff is composed of carefully selected Air Force and Army officers functioning as a team under an Air Force Commandant and an Army Deputy, for presentation of doctrine and procedures contained in the Joint Training Directive (an amplification of FM 31-35) published in September 1950 by Tactical Air Command and Office, Chief of Army Field Forces. Platform presentations are based on the Joint Training Directive but the views of all the services on areas still unresolved are considered and openly discussed. The formal instruction from the platform contains information mutually accepted but no restrictions are placed on questions presented from the floor or proposed during a panel discussion. The Marine Corps and Royal Air Force have officers permanently assigned to the school staff. Their views are presented in detail with regard to the operations of their respective systems. This is done in consonance with the primary USAFAGOS policy of complete honesty and objectivity in giving the student the broadest aspect possible in the subject of Air Ground Operations.

The Air-Ground Operations School is currently presenting three courses: the Indoctrination Course, the Specialist Course, and the Forward Air Controller Course. At the end of the first year, studies on future student potential indicated that there will be a continuing requirement for approximately 5,000 graduates each year.

The objective of the Indoctrination Course is to provide senior officers with a broad basic knowledge of the doctrine, techniques, and procedures by which air forces and surface forces in the combat zone accomplish joint planning and coordinate their efforts with respect to fulfilling their common mission—the defeat of the enemy armed forces. The course also explains the methods of requesting and controlling air support and the application of that operational force to the surface battle. It also covers the reconnaissance and the troop-carrier missions of tactical aviation. The duration of this course is five days.

The objective of the Specialist Course is to provide the student with a comprehensive knowledge of the subject material outlined for the Indoctrination Course, as well as to train the student to perform any special functions in the tactical air operations on air-ground operations system, for which he has been designated. This course is beamed primarily at the Ground Liaison Officer, G2-Air, G3-Air, S3-Air, Air Liaison Officer, Combat Intelligence Officer, Reconnaissance Specialist, and Combat Operations Officer. The duration of this course is ten days.

The objective of the Forward Air Controller Course is to provide a reservoir of Air Force pilots trained in the fundamentals of visually directing strikes against surface targets. This course is only for Air Force rated officers, whereas the other two courses are for all services. The duration of the Forward Air Controller Course is ten days.

The School originally started at Pope AFB 25 September 1950 as the Tactical Air Command School of Air-Ground Operations. On 18 June 1951 this School and its Army counterpart (Army Specialist Course) were combined and relocated at Southern Pines, North Carolina.

On 6 February 1951 the School was designated an official Air Force School and on 12 June 1952 was authorized its official crest with the motto "Honest-Enthusiastic-Objective." Funds have been allotted for the construction of permanent buildings.

From June 1950 through October 1952 over 6500 officers from Lieutenants to Lieutenant Generals, including supervisory civilian employees with equivalent rank, have graduated from the AGOS.

Of the sixty General officers (AF & Army) who attended, 34 per cent were Major Generals or Lieutenant Generals.

The 58 civilian supervisors who have attended are associated with special projects and research activity at colleges or universities and from private businesses under government contract, or from special analysis and evaluation groups in high military headquarters.

Sixty-nine Allied officers from 8 different nations have also attended AGOS.

Every opportunity is taken to realize as much benefit as possible from the fact that all students are billeted, messaged and receive instruction, with the exception of one short trip to Pope Air Force Base, in one building. Inter-relationship is encouraged not only by questions, pictorial presentations, formal panel discussions, and alternate seating in classrooms but by billeting Army and Air Force officers together, initiating social gatherings and encouraging mixed recreational activities. It all adds up to the fact that while the official mission of the school is to indoctrinate key personnel in the doctrine, tactics, techniques and procedures of air-ground operations, it has an important unwritten mission of "advancing the art of inter-service cooperation."
